AIRSHIPS IN FLIGHT HERE AND ABROAD

Curtiss Takes a Two-Mile Spin in Fast Time on Hempstead Plains.

FRENCHMAN'S NEW RECORD

25 Miles Across Country—Latham Ready to Cross Channel—Wrights Have Accident—New Machine Up State.

Glenn H. Curtiss gave an exhibition yesterday on the Hempstead Plains, near Mineola, of his new machine in a two-mile circular flight. It was the longest aeroplane flight ever made in the vicinity of New York.

At all times the machine was under control, and the aviator demonstrated his ability to handle it under ticklish conditions, for at one time, when running into the westerly breeze for his first turn, a stiff high current of air caught the delicate flying machine on the starboard side, tipping the left plane to what the spectators believed was a dangerous angle. Indeed, the tip of it actually brushed the tall grass on the field.

With the forward plane elevated, the machine righted and sailed down the field along the big board fence to the north of the Mineola fair grounds. It was nearly dark at the time, for the flight was not attempted until about 7:30 o'clock, and it was almost impossible to keep track of the aeroplane as it flew with the wind.

Curtiss then steered it to the north in a wide arc, and then gracefully curving toward the west, the loud whirring of the motor growing clearer every second, came back close to the spot from which he ascended. Shutting off the power, the bird-like contrivance glided gently to the ground.

Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin and several others caught the time of the machine in the air as two minutes and twenty-six seconds, which, if the distance was correct, made the average speed close to fifty miles an hour.

"It was the easiest and most satisfactory flight I ever made with the new machine," said Curtiss while being congratulated by a delegation of Aero Club and Aeronautic Society members, who went to Mineola to witness his first effort in this locality for a long-distance flight. "I felt sure of my ground all the time, for the long flat expanse of the Hempstead Plains presents ideal conditions for aviation."

Curtiss believes he will do better later in the week, for he ascertained in a short preliminary flight preceding the long one that the tail of the machine was not pitched at exactly the correct angle. It tilted too much upward, and this will be remedied before he attempts a longer flight, which he said he would try early this morning, provided the weather conditions are favorable.

The machine used by Curtiss is the same that he had at Morris Park recently, but owing to the nature of the ground there he was unable to make a long trip. As he has consented to go to Europe early in August as the representative of the Aero Club of America for the international aviation race at Rheims, France, on Aug. 28, Curtiss is anxious to go into a course of training for long-distance work.

Curtiss has brought with him from the Hammondsport factory three of his workmen and the aeroplane is stored in a big tent opposite the Mineola Fair Grounds and a short distance from the railroad station. The novelty of a real flying machine drew throngs of curious spectators all the afternoon and at one time a long row of automobiles was parked along the roadway.

The cottage sections of Garden City, Westbury, Hempstead, and other adjacent places were well represented and over a score of enthusiastic aeronauts went down from New York, among them being A. M. Herring, Capt. Albert C. Triaca, Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, Wilbur R. Kimball, Louis R. Adams, Augustus Post, and A. R. Pardington. Among the natives who gazed long and earnestly at the novel machine was an 88-year-old resident of Mineola.

"This is a day I will always remember," he said. "I have lived eighty-eight years to see one of those curious flying machines and I now feel satisfied."

MONOPLANE FLIES 25 MILES.

Bleriot Makes Successful Trip from Town to Town in France.

ORLEANS, France, July 13.—M. Bleriot, one of the French aeroplanists who is planning to fly across the English Channel, won the French Aero Club prize of $2,800 to-day by flying from Etampes to Chevilly.

The distance is twenty-five miles in a straight line, a little more than the distance across the Channel. It was covered by M. Bleriot in 56 minutes and 10 seconds, elapsed time. This includes a stop of eleven minutes near Toury to examine his aeroplane. His average altitude for the trip was 100 feet.

The aviator came down at the feet of the official timers. His descent was rather sudden, and the propeller of his machine was slightly damaged.

As the time limit of the flight from Etampes was six hours, and as there was no rule against making a landing, the prize was awarded to M. Bleriot.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Both Wilbur and Orville Wright expressed satisfaction at the exploit of M. Bleriot to-day in flying twenty-five miles across country in France, but neither seemed to regard it as an epoch-making feat. Both the brothers have exceeded the record established by M. Bleriot, both in time and distance, and while neither has made a straightaway flight of twenty-five miles, they have flown much further in circles and in much faster time.

In fact, Wilbur Wright does not believe that the time given in the cable dispatches is correct. He cannot see that with an elapsed time of fifty-six minutes and ten seconds, even with eleven minutes out for a stop midway in the flight, the speed for the twenty-five miles could be rapid enough to keep the monoplane in the air. When the official time is given, it is Mr. Wright's belief that it

FIND PRICELESS VASE.

"Peach Blow" of End of Ming Dynasty Was Overlooked in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Dr. Sara Yorke Stevenson, the widely known archeologist of this city, in an article written for The Public Ledger, which will be published to-morrow, tells of the discovery of a priceless oriental "peach blow" vase in a collection presented to the Pennsylvania Museum by Mrs. Bloomfield Moore in 1882.

Mrs. Stevenson says that archaeologists who have examined the collection have found that it includes a number of very valuable pieces of Chinese origin. "They range," she says, "from the Ming Dynasty, (1368-1628,) and represent the Green family and the K'ang-Hsi series (1662-1722) down to recent times.

"But the culminating 'find,'" she continues, "the crowning glory of the event, was the discovery of a splendid bottle-shaped vase dating back to about 1600, or the end of the Ming dynasty, of wonderful hue, which has been overlooked in the mass of objects crowded on the shelves, as an approach to the 'Sang de Boeuf' variety, but which upon close examination and study proved to be an older specimen of the 'Peach Blow,' 'Peach Bloom,' or 'Fleur de Peche' quality.

"The vase is sixteen inches in height. Its body is globular, with long, slender neck, on which a few imperfections in the glazing are noticeable. But as it stands it represents a small fortune, and people wil ltravel far and near to see it.

"This variety of glaze has been known in China as 'P'ing-Kuo Hung,' and the best examples were produced during the K'ang-Hsi, (1662-1722,) Yung-Cheng, (1723-1735,) and Ch'in-Lung, (1736-1795,) periods of the present dynasty. It is virtually a 'lost art.' Workmen to-day are unable to handle the gold oxides used in the creation of these porcelains as did their predecessors, and these oxides are the foundation of 'Sang de Boeuf' coral reed, some rose tints, crushed strawberry, and 'peach blow.' The color is very rare, and efforts to reproduce it in France have been but partially successful.

"As far as known this is the only vase of its order in this city; and as probably an older and larger specimen than any in this country its commercial value, were it for sale, would necessarily be limited only by the covetousness of the would-be purchaser. The museum and Philadelphia, therefore, may well be congratulated upon the possession of this rare and much-prized treasure, now installed and on exhibition at the Pennsylvania Museum in Memorial Hall."

THINK COX IS IN NEW YORK.

Friend of Missing Bookkeeper Saw Him at the Polo Grounds.

It is the belief of the relatives of Harold C. Cox, a bookkeeper in the Home Savings Bank of White Plains, who disappeared from White Plains on July 5, that he is now wandering around New York City while temporarily insane, and that he has not committed suicide, as at first believed.

This theory is borne out by the statement of Harry Gorman of Tuckahoe, who believes he saw young Cox in the field at the Polo Grounds Monday afternoon. Gorman and Cox at one time played baseball together, and were well acquainted. He feels sure he saw Cox, who suddenly was lost to sight in the big crowd.

Cox was an enthusiastic baseball player, and frequently visited the Polo Grounds. When the bookkeeper disappeared he had only $3, and his friends are wondering where he has been getting money to travel around with, unless he has been begging while demented.

The reward for information leading to his recovery was increased yesterday to $200. The Orchard Club of White Plains first offered $100, and yesterday the Union Hook and Ladder Company of the same place, of which he was a member, also offered a similar amount.

DEATH STOPPED HIS PRAYER.

With His Last Breath Wife-Slayer Said He Feared He Was Unpardoned.

Daniel McNicol of 68 Main Street, Yonkers, who on the night of Friday, July 2, killed his wife by cutting her throat because she had sworn out a warrant against him for abandonment, and then cut his own throat, lay last night in St. Joseph's Hospital, Yonkers, guarded by Policeman Lawrence Ahearn. It was 3:45 o'clock when McNicol turned over in the bed and said to the policeman:

"Pray for me, won't you?"

"Well," said Ahearn hesitatingly, "I am a pretty poor hand at praying. You yourself had better ask God to forgive you."

"I have," said McNicol, "but I tell you I'm not sure about it. I can't feel that I've been forgiven."

"Try again then," counseled Ahearn.

"O, Lord——"

There was a rattling and gurgling in McNicol's throat, a convulsion of the body, and he was dead.

Prior to July 2, Mrs. McNicol had herself gone out to work because her husband didn't. On that day she swore out the warrant charging him with abandonment. At 1 o'clock that night a policeman came to the house to serve the warrant. McNicol would not let him in.

At 3 o'clock that morning Mrs. McNicol, staggered into a neighbor's apartment, her head cut almost off, and died. McNicol was found with his windpipe severed, but still alive. The two children of the couple have found homes.

METZ NEVER REFUSES

He Says in Regard to the Mayoralty—Off to Europe.

Controller Metz, before sailing for Europe yesterday on the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, said that he would not boom himself as a candidate for the Mayoralty, but added, laughingly, that he had never refused an office when one was offered to him.

"I live in Brooklyn," said the Controller, "and that is too far from the Bowery. There are lots of good men in New York who would make good Mayors if they had the chance."

Mr. Metz said he would be gone at least two months, and will look after some business interests at Frankfort.

TROUBLE FEARED FROM THE EXCLUDED

The 800 Immigrants Held on Ellis Island Not Taking Deportation Easily.

FIGHT ON OUTGOING SHIP

Immigration Officer Knocked Down by a Steward—Hebrew Trades Protest Against the Rejections.

Owing to the increasing number of aliens waiting at Ellis Island to be deported, many of them ex-convicts and European criminals, the officials on duty there, particularly at night, are becoming uneasy. They point out that they are unarmed and would be unable to cope with a mutiny if one were started.

Two incidents have occurred in the last two days which go to show that under the leadership of some of the bad characters the immigrants might cause trouble. On Monday night ten deportation officers were detailed to take sixty-five excluded aliens to the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie at Hoboken. On their arrival at the pier the immigrants refused to go aboard the ship and tried to get away from the officials sent to see them off.

The officers and crew of the Cecilie were on their part none too well pleased at having so large a number of immigrants sent back by their boat, and the immigration officers say that the attempt was made to help them handle the unruly immigrants. Nevertheless they were got on board at last.

Yesterday Gustave Klein of the Deportation Division went on board the ship to call the roster to see if the immigrants were all there. He says that six stewards of the Cecilie knocked him down and kicked him. An immigration Inspector saw the man bleeding from cuts on his face and asked what the matter was. Klein told him, and the Inspector sent for the Hoboken police.

After Detective Sergeants Carrick and Weinthal arrived the Cecilie's stewards were lined up for Klein, who picked Rudolph Millar, a deck steward, as one of the men who had assaulted him. The steward denied that he had had any part in the attack, but as he was being taken away to be locked up he remarked he would 'have his whack," and he rushed at Klein, giving him a heavy blow on the head, which knocked the immigration officer senseless on the deck.

Millar was taken before Recorder McGovern, who remanded the prisoner until he is able to determine the power of the court to detain a man arrested on a German ship. Commissioner Williams intends to press the charge, holding that Millar's was a cowardly attack on an immigration officer in the execution of his duty.

Herman Winter, Assistant General Manager of the North German Lloyd line here, said that the steward had no right to take the law into his own hands. If, as alleged by the Cecilie's men, the immigration officials had ill-used the aliens, said Mr. Winter, it was the duty of the stewards to have reported that matter to the senior officer, but now the company would leave the man Millar to be dealt with by the courts.

The second incident occurred at Ellis Island yesterday morning, when a Russian Jew, who says he is Dr. Alexander Reidnew, a graduate of St. Petersburg and Vienna Universities, and who is awaiting deportation because he has no money and has been excluded as likely to become a public charge, began to incite the aliens to revolt. He harangued them in Yiddish and worked the men into such a state that it looked as if the immigrants would take charge of the station. One of the night watchmen went into the large hall with a revolver he had borrowed and shouted "Be quiet!" He did not point the revolver at the Russian, but "handled it carelessly" in his direction. Peace ensued.

In the afternoon Reidnew was taken before the Board of Appeal, consisting of Commissioner William Williams, Deputy Commissioner Byron Uhl, Supt. Dobler, and Chief Clerk Sheen. Asked if he had been treated badly or had not had enough to eat, the doctor replied "No."

"Have you any complaints to make?" he was asked.

"Yes," said Reidnew, "one of your watchmen came into the hall this morning and pointed a gun at me."

He will be deported.

Commissioner Williams said yesterday that no matter what his enemies had to say about him, they could not accuse him of neglecting his work on the island.

The executive committee of the United Hebrew Trades met yesterday at Clinton Hall, in Clinton Street, and sent a protest to Commissioner Williams against the imposing of money tests on immigrants. The protest said that tailors at present are much in demand and the unions as a rule are unable to supply the employers with sufficient labor; the organized Jewish workers do not desire a monopoly of the labor market for themselves and believe that there is room for every honest immigrant who has a desire to work.

ISLAND FORCE INEFFICIENT.

Washington Finds That One-fourth, or 139 in All, Are Below Standard.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Out of 472 employes at the immigration station at Ellis Island, N. Y., more than one-fourth, or 139 in all, have been found to be below the standard of efficiency, according to an announcement made to-day at the Department of Commerce and Labor. Of these 139, some will be dismissed, some reduced, and others reprimanded and warned.

In connection with the general "shake-up" pending in the department a letter of an unusual character has just been received by one of its officials. The communication is from an employe in the field service of the General Lighthouse Board in response to one from the department calling upon him for his resignation for insubordination.

Promptly acknowledging the receipt of the letter, the employe declared that the official who asked for his resignation, Secretary Nagel, and the whole Government could go to a warmer climate so far as he was concerned. He signed the letter "Disrespectfully yours."

The letter will probably be kept as a memento of the reforms which Secretary Nagel is instituting in his department.

Immigration Commissioner Williams had nothing to say yesterday about the report from Washington that there was to be a shake-up on the island affecting one-fourth of the employes. Mr. Williams departed last night for Washington to consult with his superiors in the Department of Commerce and Labor about the best way to deal with the number of cases on appeal at the island and the penniless condition of numbers of the immigrants who are arriving daily. Yesterday 204 were deported.

SAYS SUTTON SHOT HIMSELF BY ACCIDENT

Lieutenant's Bullet Meant for a Brother Officer, Declares a High Annapolis Official.

HAD $20,000 LIFE INSURANCE

This Was Invalidated by a Suicide Clause—Civilian Witnesses Called by Army Board—Suspect Named.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 13.—"Lieut. Sutton did not try to shoot himself. He shot at a man who was at the back of his neck holding his head to the ground. This explains the fatal shot and the whole affair, as I believe the new board will agree."

This is the version of the shooting given to-day by an officer of high rank who had much to do with the first investigation and who will be an important witness in the coming investigation, to open next Monday, to determine the cause of the death of Lieut. Sutton, who was killed at the Naval Academy on the night of Oct. 13, 1907. There are said to be many other officers who share this view, and who believe that the first court's verdict of suicide will be changed by the second court to one of death by accidental shooting.

"I examined Sutton's wounds shortly after the shooting," the officer explained. "The next day, before we held the court of inquiry, I tried holding the revolver in the position in which Lieut. Sutton must have held it when the shot was fired. I found that it could be held in that position, but that it was not likely that Lieut. Sutton would have aimed it as he did had he tried to shoot himself.

"I am convinced that he believed the shot would hit the man on his back, but in his anger and excitement he aimed at the wrong angle and sent the bullet crashing through his own head."

A new witness in the Lieut. James N. Sutton case has been found. He is Edward Griffith, who drove a party of marine officers to the camp here on the night of Oct. 12, 1907, just before the automobile which Lieuts. Sutton, Adams, Rocier, and Utley came over in, and who saw a part of the fight between Sutton and Adams.

Griffith stated to-night that he was a chauffeur for R. G. Chaney at the time and drove a party of marine officers, including Lieut. Potts, to the camp just before the other crowd arrived. Lieut. Potts went to his tent.

As Griffith started back to Annapolis he saw Sutton and Adams on the ground as if fighting. Griffith says that he and William Owens, the chauffeur of the other auto, were ordered by one of the officers to get out, and they left. He heard no shots.

Announcement was made at the office of Supt. Bowyer of the Naval Academy to-day that Major Harry Leonard would act as the Judge Advocate of the Second Court of Inquiry.

By two insurance men the statement was made to-night that Lieut. Sutton carried $20,000 insurance on his life, the policy having been written less than a year prior to the Lieutenant's death, and that the fact of his being officially declared a suicide would invalidate this insurance. This, it is suggested, may have something to do with the strong efforts that have been put forth to have the case reopened, and the suicide record wiped out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Practically complete silence has fallen on the preliminaries for the rehearing of the case of Lieut. James N. Sutton, the young Marine Corps officer whose death at the Naval Academy on the night of Oct. 13, 1907, is to be reinvestigated by a board of inquiry.

Mrs. Sutton, the mother of the officer, returned to Washington to-night, but on the advice of her attorneys declined to comment on the case. With her attorneys Mrs. Sutton to-morrow will go over the evidence they have collected and settle some disputed points in preparation for the reopening of the hearing at Annapolis on Monday.

Mrs. Sutton's charges are in the hands of Capt. Campbell, Judge Advocate General of the Navy. In them she declares the verdict of the first board of inquiry that her son ended his own life was not borne out by the testimony. It is understood that Mrs. Sutton goes even further and directly charges that her son was killed by one of his brother officers, and she drives this charge home by naming the man she suspects.

The first board was forced to rely entirely on testimony wrung from officers and men of the Marine Corps and the navy. The board on Monday will have the chauffeur before it who took the five officers to the scene where Sutton lost his life. Other civilian witnesses also have been subpoenaed.

The only witness who will not be present is Lieut. John Potts of the Marine Corps. Through a mistake Lieut. T. M. Potts, Jr., of the navy was summoned to appear, and when the error was discovered it was found that the time before the convening of the court was too short to requisition the right man, who is on duty in the Philippines.

It is stated emphatically that no attempt will be made to call Miss Margaret A. Stewart of Pittsburg, over whom the officers are said to have quarreled. Developments have proved that the dragging of Miss Stewart's name into the case was indefensible, for she had only met young Sutton, and knew the other officers slightly, if at all. The young woman is now in Canada, whither she went to escape the publicity and notoriety that followed the coupling of her name with the affair.

CAPITAL OF PERSIA IN HANDS OF REBELS

Constitutionalists Draw Off Defenders by Feint and Enter Teheran with Little Resistance.

SHAH NOT TO BE DEPOSED

Nationalists Want Only a Real Constitution—Parliament Is Called—Fighting Proceeds in City.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—A special dispatch to The London Times, dated Teheran, 8 P. M., says:

"Firing has been continuous all day, since detachments of the Nationalist forces entered the capital this morning, in various parts of the city, but chiefly in the neighborhood of Gun Square, where there have been several casualties.

"We are bottled up in the neighborhood of Gun Square, and can get very little information, as everybody who ventures into the adjacent streets is fired upon. There does not appear, however, to have been any definite aggression on either side as yet.

"It is understood that the Shah is still at Sultanahabad, though it is believed in some quarters that he may take refuge in the Russian Legation.

"The events of to-day caused extraordinary surprise except to the initiated few. After the fighting which occurred outside Teheran it was not supposed possible that the Nationalist forces could enter the city without first fighting a successful general engagement. Their sudden move, however, which was clearly conceived and brilliantly executed, enabled them to get through without firing a shot.

"They were enthusiastically received by the people in those parts of the town which they now occupy, and some 3,000 of the people are said to have been enrolled and armed by them."

LONDON, July 13.—A special dispatch from Teheran says that the Nationalists attacked the Cossacks in the barracks and artillery square for two hours this evening without succeeding in capturing the positions. The combat was fiercely waged, the Cossacks using shrapnel.

A body of the Shah's troops, a dispatch says, is coming from Shahabad by forced marches to the assistance of the Royalists.

TEHERAN, July 13.—The constitutional forces, the advance of which on Teheran for a time was not considered serious, are now in possession of the greater part of the city, which they entered this morning without encountering any organized resistance.

While Sardarasad and Sipahdar, the leaders in the movement, diverted the attention of the royalists by demonstrations to the west, a strong body of Nationalists and Bakhtiaris made their way unnoticed around to the north, from which point the capture of the capital was not difficult.

The guards at the northern gates were disarmed and the invaders marched into the foreign section, the leaders taking up their quarters in the old Parliament building. This gives the nationalists command of the city, with the exception of the artillery square and the drill ground adjoining. The royalists are badly situated to make further resistance, and the Cossacks, under command of Russian officers, remain outside the city, entirely cut off from their comrades in the artillery square.

There is much ill-feeling against the Russians, and the Nationalists are endeavoring to prevent any incident that might justify a Russian force entering the city.

TIFLIS, July 13.—News has been received here from Teheran that the Arab horsemen who constituted the Shah's bodyguard have joined the Nationalists. It is said also that a general boycott has been declared against all Russian merchants in Persia.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 13.—The Foreign Office has received no dispatches from Teheran regarding the entry of the Nationalist forces into the Persian capital, and the only information here, aside from the dispatches from London, is a brief telegram from the Russian Consul at Ispahan, announcing that the Nationalists were in the capital. He reports that a salute was fired in Ispahan on receipt of the news, but the population is quiet.

It is regarded here as quite probable that the Shah will seek refuge at either the British or Russian Legation, and if he does take this step it will be considered equivalent to abdication. He will receive an escort of troops to the frontier, and the Anglo-Russian consular guards will unite to protect him at whichever legation he takes refuge.

The occupation of the Persian Capital by the Nationalists to-day is the result of the insistence of the Persian people that the Shah govern the country under the Constitution that was granted on Jan. 1, 1907. The Shah has shown an inclination to ignore the Constitution, which he signed when he ascended the throne, and he has even gone so far as to withdraw it.

His course has resulted in widespread unrest in Persia, which in some sections has approached anarchy, and the movement to compel him to observe the Constitution crystallized until, following the dissolution of Parliament in 1908, a great part of the country broke out in insurrection, particularly at Tabriz, which fell into the hands of the Nationalists after short but fierce fighting.

While the Shah was trying to cope with this situation in the north the Bakhtiari tribesmen, the fighting race of Persia, rose in the South and early this year captured Ispahan, 210 miles south of Teheran. The tribesmen then began the long march to the capital, and their advance guard arrived in front of Teheran last month.

In addition to her internal disorders Persia has been beset by serious situations on her frontiers. One one side Turkey has invaded Persia in the direction of Urumiah, her ground for this step being a frontier dispute of long standing, and what, with raids by Kurdish bandits and Turkish troops, the City of Urumiah is surrounded.

On the other side the British and Russian Governments have been exerting their influence to induce the Shah to summon a representative assembly to bring the state of anarchy to an end, and Russia, acting in full accord with Great Britain, has dispatched a military expedition into Persia from Baku for the protection of foreigners. This force is now at Kasvin, 86 miles from Teheran.

LUCANIA STOPS AT FISHGUARD

Lands Part of Mail There, Then Goes On to Liverpool.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—While the Cunard Line officials in England have refused to admit officially the intention of utilizing Fishguard as a landing place for passengers and mails, as announced in THE NEW YORK TIMES on July 6, the Lucania adopted the plan to-night, landing a portion of her mails at Fishguard at 7 P. M., afterward proceeding to Liverpool with the rest of the mail and the passengers.

Advices from a reliable correspondent in Liverpool say that although the officials still refuse to make any statement there is little doubt that the call at Fishguard will be made by all the fast Cunard steamers, following the White Star liners' Holyhead move.

The Cunard liner Mauretania, sailing to-day for Liverpool, carries 425 first cabin and 400 second cabin passengers, which is a record number for this season.

No message was received here from the Cunard office in Liverpool yesterday regarding the Mauretania calling at Fishguard to land her passengers after leaving Queenstown. One of the Cunard officials said that it might be possible that Capt. Pritchard would receive instructions by wireless when he gets in touch with the other side, to make the experiment at Fishguard.

POLICE RAID UNEMPLOYED.

Tailors Looking for a Job from Fifth Avenue Houses Fined $1 Each.

Capt. Howard of the new West Twentieth Street Station, at the head of the reserves, swooped down yesterday on a crowd of unemployed men, most of them Jews, who were congregated, on the chance of getting a job, in Fifth Avenue, between Sixteenth and Eighteenth Streets, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock. Eighty-two men were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. For some time complaints have been made of the men who congregate around the large lace and suit houses in the district.

The police arrested everybody who looked as if he might be lounging about waiting for something to turn up. The first patrol wagon took away twenty-one tailors, all unemployed, and a second trip brought eleven more to the station house.

The men were arraigned in the afternoon before Magistrate Cornell, in Jefferson Market Court, and were fined $1 apiece.

TAXI CARRIES OFF HURT MAN.

Cab Disappears with Him After Knocking Him Down.

Cab 47,352 of the New York Taxicab Company ran through West Thirty-fifth Street into Fifth Avenue early yesterday morning, just as a tall man with a brown mustache was crossing Thirty-fifth Street, bound north, up the avenue.

The car struck him when he was directly between the front wheels, knocked him down, passed half over him, dragged him some twenty feet, and then, dropping him, passed on. The man lay perfectly still, crumpled on the asphalt. The chauffeur brought the car to a stop, jumped with another man from the box, picked up the man, and carried him into the cab. Then both men jumped back to the box and ran the cab one block down the avenue and west through Thirty-fourth Street.

Only one other person saw the accident; no policeman was near. The taxicab company said half an hour later it had not heard about it.

Mrs. S. M. Ronk Killed in Auto Accident

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 13.—Mrs. Sylvester M. Ronk of this city, a widow, was killed to-day in an automobile accident, which occurred near Bloomingburg. The touring car, in which she was riding with several relatives, struck the iron work of a bridge and overturned. All the occupants were thrown out.

THAW'S WIFE AGAIN TRIES TO SHIELD HIM

Refuses to Reveal His Alleged Threat to Kill Her Unless Court Orders Her To.

TELLS OF ASYLUM VISIT

O'Reilly Was with Her and Thaw's Eyes Blazed—Talked of White's Murder—More Witnesses for Thaw.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 13.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of Harry K. Thaw, who is trying to prove to Justice Mills in the Supreme Court here that he is sane and should be liberated from the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, took the stand unexpectedly this afternoon as a witness for the State. That she was to testify was known, but it was not expected that she would be called so soon.

When Thaw came into court after the luncheon recess he appeared to be somewhat excited. It was said he had been informed that his wife was then downstairs with District Attorney Winslow waiting to be called as a witness. Thaw engaged in earnest consultation with Charles Morschauser, his lawyer, and when that was over talked just as earnestly with his mother, who sat directly behind him.

Others in the group around Thaw were his sister, the former Countess of Yarmouth; his brother, Josiah Thaw, and his wife, and the Rev. Dr. Robert Christie, a Presbyterian minister of Pittsburg. A young man who is said to be a doctor also joined the group.

When Judge Mills had called the court to order Mr. Clark, for the State, asked Mr. Morschauser if he would consent to suspend calling the Thaw witnesses temporarily so that the State might put Evelyn Nesbit Thaw on the stand.

Mr. Morschauser at first waited an hour in which to consult with Thaw about it, but finally agreed that Mrs. Thaw should be called immediately.

Evelyn Thaw on the Stand.

The court was packed, at least half the crowd being women, when Mrs. Thaw entered, accompanied by District Attorney Winslow. She was dressed in blue, and wore a big feathered hat. She did not appear to be nervous, and those in court who knew her well said she had never looked better in her life.

Mrs. Thaw had to walk down the main aisle, but did not pass close to her husband on her way to the stand, going around instead of behind the jury box. She tripped lightly to the stand and smiled pleasantly at Justice Mills as she took the leather-covered chair placed there for her.

She began at once to glance around the courtroom, but did not look at her husband. She had smiles for several in the room with whom she was acquainted.

"What is your name?" asked Mr. Clark.

"Evelyn Nesbit Thaw," was the answer in a clear voice.

"Are you the wife of Harry K. Thaw?"

"I am."

"Do you remember when Harry K. Thaw was first committed to the Matteawan Asylum?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Soon thereafter did you visit Thaw in the asylum at Matteawan in company with Daniel O'Reilly?"

"Yes, Sir, I did."

"Did you then, while Mr. O'Reilly was present, have a conversation in the Matteawan Asylum with Harry K. Thaw?"

Still Shields Her Husband.

"I would rather not answer that question, please," said Mrs. Thaw, looking appealingly at Justice Mills.

"Well, suppose I put it this way," continued Mr. Clark, "during the conversation referred to did Harry K. Thaw say anything in the nature of a threat to kill you?"

Before Mrs. Thaw could answer, Mr. Morschauser strenuously objected to her answering on the ground that the talk in the asylum had been a confidential communication between husband and wife.

"That rule applies when no third person is present, does it not?" said Justice Mills.

"Any threat against life," broke in Mr. Clark, "is not a confidential communication. The rule was never intended as a mantle for a criminal threat."

"This is not a criminal case," declared Justice Mills.

"Husbands are constantly being arrested and held for threatening their wives," protested Mr. Clark.

Justice Mills said that if what had been said in the case at issue was a result of the marital tie it appeared to come under the head of a confidential communication.

"I have declined to answer," Mrs. Thaw interrupted, "and so far I have made no claim for privilege."

The question was then dropped temporarily and an attempt made to get the evidence in by another way.

"Before that visit," asked Mr. Clark, "had not Daniel O'Reilly ceased to be the personal counsel of Harry K. Thaw, and had he not become, instead, your personal attorney?"

"I think that is true," answered Mrs. Thaw.

"Well, then, at the time of that visit how did Thaw appear?"

Mr. Morschauser jumped to his feet again with an objection which was sustained.

The question was then framed in a different way, and Mrs. Thaw turned to Justice Mills.

She Appeals to the Judge

"I do not want to answer, Judge," she said, "and if I don't, will I be in contempt? I can't afford that, for I cannot afford to have counsel, as my husband is not supporting me. But if you say I must, I will."

"You must answer," replied Justice Mills kindly.

"Now, Mrs. Thaw," said Mr. Clark, "will you describe his dress, the look in his eyes, the expression of his features, his movements, and his manner at the time of that visit?"

"Ask the questions one at a time, please," said Mrs. Thaw.

"Very well," replied Mr. Clark. "Describe his appearance."

"I met him in the dining room, I think, and he sat in a chair by a table most of the time. The visit lasted only a few minutes. I think he had a handkerchief about his neck and his hair was mussed. There was a look of confusion in his eyes."

"Did his eyes protrude?" asked Mr. Clark.

Mr. Morschauser objected, but was overruled, and he took an exception.

"I do not know that they protruded," replied Mrs. Thaw, "but they were very prominent. They always were that."

"Were they more prominent than usual that day?"

"Yes, I think they were."

"During that talk did Thaw say this, or in substance of this, to you, 'When I get out of here I shall have to kill you'?"

Mr. Morschauser objected, and the question was not allowed at the time.

"Then, before assuming that such a thing was said prior to that, had Thaw asked you to do something for him that you had refused to do?" continued Mr. Clark.

"No."

After some legal sparring this line of questioning was dropped.

"In the course of your talk," asked Judge Mills, "did you and Thaw refer to his detention in the hospital?"

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Thaw replied.

"At that time was not A. Russell Peabody the personal counsel for Mr. Thaw, and was not Mr. O'Reilly acting in a similar capacity for you?" Mr. Clark asked.

"I think that was the case," she answered.

The object of this was to establish the fact that Daniel O'Reilly was not present as Counsel to Thaw, which, it was said, might eliminate the barrier to Mrs. Thaw's answering the questioss the State wanted to ask.

Talk Was of White's Murder.

"Was the subject of the conversation that of the shooting of Stanford White?"

"Yes."

At this juncture District Attorney Winslow of Westchester, who is said to be particularly familiar with the facts in Mr. Jerome's possession, took his first open part in the case.

"Your Honor," said Mr. Winslow, "the question is whether Harry Kendall Thaw is sane or insane, and, therefore, the sole issue at hand is the sanity or insanity of this man. Any evidence that can be introduced that would protect Mrs. Thaw and also the people of the State, and which would show the mental status of this man would be competent. How can the court decide as to the mental condition of this man if a test reflecting directly on the question at issue is excluded?"

At this juncture the direct questioning of Mrs. Thaw was concluded, and to-day Justice Mills is expected to rule finally on the question whether Thaw's wife shall answer. It was said in this connection that Lawyer Daniel O'Reilly might be subpoenaed to prove that he had not been of Thaw's counsel at the time of the visit to the asylum.

For the next hour Mrs. Thaw was kept busy identifying the handwriting of Thaw in numerous letters and documents. No effort was made to introduce the documents into evidence yesterday. Mrs. Thaw will be recalled to-day

More Witnesses for Thaw.

In the morning session of court numerous other witnesses were called for Thaw all of whom testified that Thaw, in their opinion, was sane. Among them were former attendants in the Matteawan Asylum, who had watched Thaw; the jailkeeper of Dutchess County, Tombs keepers, many laymen, and a Presbyterian preacher.

Edward C. Haven, the Dutchess County jailer, the first witness, declared that Thaw's actions while in the jail had always been rational.

William W. Smith, a venerable citizen of Poughkeepsie, with a business record of sixty-one years, testified next that he had visited Thaw several times, when their conversations generally had to do with religious matters. He said Thaw seemed thoroughly conversant with the Scriptures. He, too, thought Thaw was rational.

Otto Metz, a Tombs keeper, said he had often talked with Thaw about politics. Prior to meeting Thaw, Metz said, he had been a Bryan man, but Thaw had argued against free silver with him, and converted him to the Taft standard. He said that Thaw said the credit of the country would be ruined if the free silver theory were put in force.

Joseph Hudson, 80 years old, who before he went in for politics had been for forty years a New York Central Railroad conductor, testified that he had learned much of the way European railroads are operated from Thaw. He said Thaw talked most intelligently on these subjects. "Uncle Joe," as everybody in White Plains calls Mr. Hudson, also said he was certain Thaw is rational.

William G. Morgan of Poughkeepsie testified that he had often visited Thaw in the jail in Poughkeepsie. Once, he said, he found Thaw reading a NEW YORK TIMES editorial, in which some criticism was made of the trips Thaw had been making around Poughkeepsie. Thaw said to him that he believed the man who wrote the editorial believed he was sane or else he would not have written such a harsh editorial. Mr. Morgan said he believed Thaw to be rational.

William C. Holmes, a night keeper in the Tombs and a Grand Army man, said Thaw was a good sleeper. He had talked with him often about war incidents. Gen. Grant and the Battle of Stone Mountain were some of the subjects thus discussed. Thaw had told the witness that he had an uncle killed and another taken prisoner in the war. The witness thought Thaw was rational.

Thaw's Opinion of Dr. Baker.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Thompson Angevine of Poughkeepsie met Thaw at the prison services in the jail there. Among other things they had talked about the origin of the Dutch Reformed Church, the Prince of Condé, the Duke of Guise, and Henry of Navarre. Thaw, the witness said, gave him a cigar. Mr. Angevine underwent a long cross-examination, but his faith in Thaw's sanity was not shaken.

Theodore P. Butler of the State Hospital for the Insane of Rhode Island next testified that he had watched Thaw at Matteawan a month while Thaw was there and had always addressed him, "Hello, Harry." On cross-examination he admitted that he had not worked in the ward where Thaw was kept and never talked with him much. He said he knew "Billie" Thaw and that Harry told him "Bill is a fine fellow." He said he believes Thaw is sane.

Frank Twomey of Cleveland, Ohio, a former Matteawan attendant, who had Thaw in charge for several months and who is now employed in the Ohio State Hospital, testified that during Thaw's second commitment he had talked with him every day for six months. He said Thaw had suggested a new way for cleaning away the snow at Matteawan, which had been a good suggestion.

While he was watching Thaw the Superintendent had ordered Thaw removed to another room. Twomey said he heard this was done because it was feared Thaw might try to get away. When he told Thaw the reason, Thaw had said "it was all bosh." The trial of Thornton Hains, whose acquittal Thaw predicted for lack of evidence directly connecting him with the Annis shooting, was one of the things that Twomey and Thaw talked about, the witness said.

On the cross-examination Twomey admitted that Thaw had called Dr. Baker, the Superintendent, a "chump," because he would not allow him to see his mother alone. He also admitted that he had heard Thaw speak of Dr. Baker as a "damn fool."

The Rev. Dr. Robert Christie of Pittsburg, the last witness, told of having taken luncheon with Thaw in Poughkeepsie. He said he had known Thaw sixteen years and was certain that he is rational.

Mr. Clark announced that Drs. Austin Flint and Carlos B McDonald would be the State's alienists to examine Thaw and with Dr. Amos B. Baker of the Matteawan Asylum, would make up the trio of experts for the State.

Thaw's counsel said he would not announce the names of the plaintiff's alienists until he had conferred further with his client.

It was said that Thaw would submit to the examination at the conclusion of the court testimony.

ROBERT S. BROOKS DROWNS.

Young American Engineer a Victim of the Yaqui River in Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, July 13.—Searching parties, well stocked with provisions, have left Cananea in search of the body of Robert Stewart Brooks, a relative of Congressman Robert Stewart of New York, who was drowned in the Yaqui River, in Mexico, on July 6. Dr. L. D. Ricketts of Mexico City, for whom Mining Engneer Brooks was making the field trip in the Yaqui country, has been notified of the death of Brooks.

Young Brooks, who was in the Princeton engineering class of 1898, but who was serving in Cuba as a Lieutenant of Engineers at the time of the commencement, was Dr. Ricketts's protégé. While here suffering from ptomaine poisoning he confided to friends that he had made a will bequeathing his valuable mining and engineering library, as well as an extensive collection of curios gathered in Mexico, South America, and Cuba, to Dr. Ricketts.

$25,000,000 THE YIELD OF CORPORATION TAX

This, in Round Numbers, Is What Wall Street Figures the Government Will Gain.

STEEL'S SHARE $1,332,449

The Standard Oil Comes Next, with $500,000 as Its Annual Payment—Exact Figures Hard to Obtain.

If the corporation tax amendment as agreed upon at the conference at the White House on Monday fixing a rate of 1 per cent. of the net earnings of corporations is finally passed by Congress, it was calculated in Wall Street yesterday that the United States Government will receive a yearly corporation revenue of from $27,000,000 up.

This is only rough figuring, as it is impossible, to get at the exact data of any corporations but the railroads, excepting as the corporations have consented to give information in their periodical reports. The railroads are obliged, by law, to file complete reports with the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

Wall Street has a way, though, of estimating these matters, and the calculation made yesterday is regarded as being approximately accurate. It may be that with the 1 per cent. tax the yield will be considerably over $25,000,000 in 1910, when it is expected that the tax rate will be put into force. It is reasonably certain that it will not be less.

The last census of the industrial corporations was made in 1905 and Wall Street had those figures to work on. Then some of the corporations have given an inkling of the status of their affairs in their reports and these also served as a guide.

Steel Trust Biggest Contributor.

The United States Steel Corporation will be the largest contributor to Uncle Sam's coffers under the 1 per cent. tax. In its report for 1907, which is regarded as an indication of what its business will be this year and next, its earnings, upon which the tax could be levied, were $133,244,930. This figure represents the earnings after the fixed charges, such as interest on bonds, were deducted. On a basis of 1 per cent. the Steel Trust would pay a tax of $1,332,449. The year 1907 was taken rather than last year because of the disturbed conditions, which caused a great depreciation in all industrial lines in 1908.

The Standard Oil Company, with its many subsidiary corporations, will pay the next highest rate. Standard Oil does not make a habit of taking the public into its confidence, and to arrive at a definite conclusion is out of the question. The trust has 98,338,300 snares of capital stock outstanding, and this has been paying dividends of $40 a share—making $39,335,320 in dividends alone. Besides this, there is an income to be figured in, which will amount to probably $11,000,000. These two items upon which the tax may be levied, would bring the total to $50,000,000 approximately, and the 1 per cent tax would, on that basis, compel the Standard to pay $500,000.

There are a score of large corporations which will be obliged to pay a tax of anywhere from $100,000 to $350,000. Many others will be taxed from $50,000 to $100,000.

The census of 1905 showed the capital of corporations engaged in manufacture at that time to be $10,510,811,305. It has been calculated that most of the large corporations will earn approximately 10.447 per cent. of the total of their capitalization. This is not so in the case of many corporations, as some earn considerably more, while others earn less, but in figuring the probable total of tax to be derived under the 1 per cent. rate, Wall Street has taken 10.447 per cent. as a fair average. Applying that as the basis of calculation, it is estimated that the corporations in 1907 earned $1,008,004,462.

In 1907 the net earnings of the railroads of the country were $840,580,764, exclusive of the income from sources other than operation. This brings the total net earnings of all the corporations of the country in 1907 to $1,938,654,226. The growth of corporations for the five years prior to 1905 was about 40 per cent.

Taking 40 per cent. as an average of growth from 1905 to 1910, it is figured that the industrial corporations next year will have net earnings of approximately $1,500,000,000, while the railroads will, it is expected, yield net earnings of at least $1,000,000,000, which would bring the total to $2,500,000,000, which, at the 1 per cent. tax rate, would bring the Government $25,000,000.

It is regarded as altogether likely that, with the constantly improved condition of business throughout the country it will be found, when the census is taken next year, that there has been a considerably greater increase than 40 per cent. over 1905, even with the set back of the panic. If this is found to be the case the tax yield will be much higher than $25,000,000.

BIGAMIST ADVISES WOULD-BE HUSBANDS

"Doesn't Pay to be Soft and Sweet," Says Johnson, Who Admits Many Marriages.

CONFESSES AT PRISON DOOR

Solicitous for Fair Sex, Too—Don't Marry Men Who "Talk Too Sweet," but Business Men.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 13.—Christian C. Johnson, alias John Madson, sentenced yesterday at San José to seven years in State prison for bigamy, has made a full confession. This is a document which, in addition to the names of the seventeen women he is able to remember who were either his wives or victims, contains advice on how to subdue a woman. Johnson says he left his business of horse buying to build up his matrimonial scheme. When he first came to this country Johnson was a woman hater because he had been separated from a sweetheart who died later.

"I am not a hypnotist," says Johnson, "but I only have to meet a woman a few times and I know just how to handle her and how to talk to her.

"The women I met fell in love with me after I talked with them only a few times. I have found it did not pay to be soft and sweet with a woman. Treat her a little harsh, and be a little distant, and she will come to you. If I saw a woman that I really liked, I made up my mind I would make her fall in love with me, and it was very seldom that I failed.

"Once started on the idea of getting money from women, I continued to dupe them and I did not marry these that I could get money from without so doing, and it was only where I found it impossible to get money otherwise that I married them.

"My advice to women who want to marry is to never marry through a matrimonial agency. You never can tell who you are going to meet. Look at my case, for instance.

"After my first marriage to Mrs. Brown I went about the country with deliberate intention of getting money from women, even if I had to marry them to do it.

"I would also warn women against marrying a man who talks too sweet. Marry a business man, one that will talk business always."

This is the list of seventeen women whom Johnson remembers he married or victimized:

Mrs. CATHERINE HOEN, San Diego, Cal.
Mrs. JOSEPHINE TRETHEWAY, Stockton, Cal.
Mrs. SYLVIA POLLARD DE BONNETT, San Francisco.
Mrs. HENRIETTA LEOPOLD, San Francisco.
Mrs. MARY BROWN, Springfield, Mass.
Mrs. FRANCES HEPBURN, Oakland, Cal.
Miss MINNIE CATHER, San Francisco.
Mrs. JOSEPHINE HENNINGER, Oakland, Cal.
Mrs. BIRDIE KING, Hot Springs, Ark.
Mrs. ELIZABETH M. JACKSON, Iola, Kan.
Mrs. MARY FRICK, East St. Louis, Ill.
"CATHERINE," hospital nurse, St. Louis.
Mrs. ALICE RICHARDSON, St. Louis.
Mrs. CATALINA BAUGHMAN, St. Louis.
Mrs. MINNIE ALLEN, St. Louis.
Mrs. BETHA KING, Memphis, Tenn.
Mrs. De LOEM, wife of a sea Captain, Portland, Ore.

Johnson left the city to-day with a Deputy Sheriff for the San Quentin Penitentiary. He says he married only one woman out of the ten under the name of John Madson. Her name was Jones. She had been divorced from her husband, and she owned a third interest in the biggest coal and wood yard in South Portland. He got $1,800 from her, but says he could have got $50,000 from her.

Johnson tells in detail of his wooing and marrying women in Louisville, Chicago, and Kansas City. Then he appeared in San Francisco, put matrimonial advertisements in papers, got money from several women, and married Mrs. Tretheway of Stockton. He deserted her when she found he had been corresponding with other women.

will show the distance to have been covered much more quickly.

When in France last year Wilbur established the world's record for sustained flight, remaining up in his aeroplane two hours and covering in that time a little more than 100 miles. This distance was traversed in circular flights, each being a little more than a kilometer.

When asked whether they would try to duplicate or outdo the French aviator's feat the Wrights merely smiled.

LATHAM MAKES FINE FLIGHT.

Stays Up Fifteen Minutes in Preparation for Channel Attempt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—Hubert Latham made a trial flight of fifteen minutes at Sangatte to-day and will probably attempt to fly across the English Channel to-morrow.

The correspondents at Sangatte agree that the slight accident at the end of the trial flight, when the wheels of the propeller were slightly damaged in alighting, can be disregarded, and in no wise discounted the wonder and admiration which Latham's trial excited.

WRIGHT AEROPLANE BROKEN.

Orville Crashes Into the Ground in Avoiding the Balloon House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Two unsatisfactory flights, the second being disastrous to the aeroplane, were made by Orville Wright at Fort Myer to-day. As a result of a too sudden descent and his failure to shut off the engine, the machine sustained a broken skid. The damage is not serious, and the smashed runner will be repaired to-morrow. In neither of the flights was the machine up for half a minute.

At 6:20 o'clock, after Orville had tested the engine, the machine was launched. It rose to a height of about ten feet and sailed down the field, but in spite of the aviator's obvious efforts to point its nose upward, it maintained that altitude. Seeing that he was not going to clear the balloon house, which was directly in his path, Orville shut off the engine and returned to earth. The descent was entirely successful.

The men of the Signal Corps hurried down the parade ground, and the aeroplane was brought back for another trial. Twenty-five minutes later it was again shot off, but the breeze again interfered, and although Orville made a gallant struggle to lift the machine upward, he was forced to make a hurried landing in order to avoid sweeping down on the balloon house. But he failed to stop the engine in time, and the drive of the big propellers shot the aeroplane down so hard on a slight rise that the left skid was cracked and broken near the frontal planes.

Had the parade ground been roomier the machine would have risen within a couple of hundred yards successfully enough, but the cramped quarters in which the Wrights have to fly made it dangerous for them to risk a collision with the balloon shed.

There was not so large a gallery to-day as has marked former flights. Count von Bernsdorff, the German Ambassador, was on the ground again, and spent some time examining the machine and conversing with the Wrights. Several members of Congress also were present, but they did not meet the fate of Brig. Gen. George H. Torney, Surgeon General of the army, who was driven by a cavalry Sergeant from the field.

Gen. Torney, with two friends, made his way to the starting track when the Wrights were preparing for their second attempts. He was discovered by a red-headed Irish trooper, who rode up and saluted.

"Have yez a badge, sor?" asked the trooper.

"I have," responded the officer, who was in civilian clothes, producing a red badge. "Here you are."

"No good, sor," said the Sergeant tersely. "Yez'll have to git back. Only whoite badges is ricognized here, sor."

Gen. Torney produced his card and smilingly gave it to the trooper. It did not appear to have any effect, for the Sergeant saluted again and repeated his command for the party to leave.

"Well, my man," said the officer, turning on his heel and beckoning his friends to follow. "I suppose you have to follow orders."

The party left the field, the trooper riding close behind them.

Although Charles Taylor, the Wrights' mechanician, can easily repair the broken skid to-morrow, it is not likely that any flight will be attempted, according to Wilbur Wright. But the anxiety of the brothers to get their machine in shape and the nearing of the date of the official trials may prompt them to attempt a test, provided the weather conditions are satisfactory in the evening.

NEW FLYING MACHINE FOUND.

New York Carpenter Discovered Testing One in the Hudson Highlands.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., July 13.—For more than a month various people in this neighborhood have seen from time to time a flying machine in the Highlands on the opposite side of the Hudson River, about a mile or two above this village. It generally appeared about 7 o'clock in the evening.

Determining to ascertain just what the thing looked like at close range, a newspaper reporter and a friend went in an automobile to the opposite side of the river, and with field glasses watched for the airship last night. It appeared as usual and only a short distance ahead of the auto. After making several low dives the machine sped along in a straight line for a distance of two miles or more and then made a complete circle. After making the return trip the machine lowered slowly and anchored about in the place it had arisen from.

Searching through the wooded road the reporter and his friend came upon a farmhouse, and in a vacant lot nearby discovered two men and the flying machine. The men were much wrought up when the auto stopped, ordering the strangers to "Go on about your business." At first the owner of the machine refused to talk, but after some persuasion he said he was Ralph T. Jenkins, and that he lived in 137th Street, New York, near Seventh Avenue.

He said he was a carpenter and his brother a machinist. The invention was his own, and he first built a model which worked to perfection. For the last eight months he has been living on this farm in the highlands of Orange County, where he built the big machine, getting all his material from Newburg excepting the motors used in it. These he obtained in New York.

The flying machine is seventy-five feet long and consists of two boxlike parts twenty feet square and covered with canvas. In each of these is held a large bag which is filled with compressed air. Connecting these two boxes is a channel covered with canvas, and here the motors are located. In this compartment also the operator rides.

Two large fans looking exactly like electric fans, only having arms measuring about seven feet in length and three feet wide, are fastened at the extreme ends of the device, but are arranged to work opposite to each other. One of the fans, said Mr. Jenkins, drives the machine ahead and the other is used to reverse it. A similar fan wheel under the car helps it in arising.

Mr. Jenkins guards his invention closely. He refused to allow any one within twenty-five feet of the machine. He hopes to have his invention on exhibition in Washington late this Fall. Once last week he crossed and recrossed the river in his flying machine.

AIRSHIPS TO USE STATIONS.

Zeppelin Negotiating with Railway Administration for Enlargements.

BERLIN, July 13.—Count Zeppelin is in Berlin negotiating with the Prussian Railroad administration for a working arrangement between his proposed airship passenger lines and the railroads, by which railroad stations are to be enlarged to serve as shelters for airships. This is considered less costly than the erection of special airship sheds in the principal cities of Germany.

TAFT FOR FREE OIL, ORE, COAL, AND HIDES

Carries His Fight Against a Duty on Raw Materials Into the Tariff Conference Itself.

A COMPROMISE LOOKED FOR

House Hopeful of Cutting Down Aldrich's Victory for Revision Upward—Burrows Opposes President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The President has informed the conferrees that he desires the free listing of iron ore, coal, oil, and hides. This general statement in support of free raw materials was received with great attention by the members of the conference, it is understood, and to-night the President's expressed preference in these and other paragraphs is expected to play an important part in turning the scales in favor of Chairman Payne's contentions for the Lower House rates.

While the President's expression is not taken in any sense as a threat by the conferrees, they do feel, according to the statement of one or them to-day, that full weight must be given the President's wishes. He seemed to think that the upshot of the difference, particularly in regard to the raw materials mentioned, would be in the nature of a compromise.

It is on iron that the President has met, as far as is known, his first open reverse in what attempts he has made to influence Congressmen. Senator Burrows of Michigan was summoned to the White House yesterday, and to-day it became known that the President asked the Senator to vote in conference for free iron ore. There was some talk on the subject, with the result that Mr. Burrows refused the request, and to-day it is ascertained that Mr. Burrows has gone even further than a passive resistance.

Getting in touch with his fellow-statesman, Mr. Fordney, the Senator from Michigan agreed to stand out against any reductions from the Senate rate of 25 cents a ton. It is reported to-night that in that clique Mr. Calderhead of Kansas and Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania, both House managers, have aligned themselves.

Against the clique, however, and against most efforts made to have the higher Senate rates accepted, Mr. Payne has set himself stubbornly, and when the conference recessed at 6 o'clock this afternoon there was much murmuring against the persistence of his efforts to retain intact the bill as passed by the House.

On the House side, while there is a tendency toward despondency over the prospect of any real revision, it is pointed out hopefully by the revisionists that Mr. Payne's signature is absolutely necessary to the adoption in that body of a conference report.

As has been indicated in these dispatches, conservative members of the conference on the part of the Senate incline to the belief that Mr. Aldrich will score his deepest mark in the bill concerning the administrative clause. Many of the high Senate rates, it is pointed out, were insisted on either for the purpose of purchasing the support of certain Senators or for subsequent concession to the House.

There are members on the House side who profess to believe that Mr. Aldrich will put through his duty of $1.50 on lumber. Oil, too, it is predicted among the Senators, will lose some of the countervailing duty accorded it in the Senate. If it does not actually reach the free list. Hides seem to be considered problematical.

Mr. Aldrich said to-day that the corporation tax had not yet returned from its last trip to the Department of Justice. Among the insurgents, however, it is stated that when the corporation tax was submitted to the legal experts of the department they all decided that if the Pollock case stands declaring an income tax unconstitutional, this levy also will be wiped from the statute books by the Supreme Court.

COREY LIKES THIS TARIFF.

Head of the Steel Trust Says We Are Facing Great Prosperity.

William E. Corey, President of the United States Steel Corporation, returned yesterday from Europe on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, highly satisfied with the Tariff bill and full of optimism for the immediate future of this country.

"America to-day," said Mr. Corey, "stands at the gate of the greatest era of prosperity that the country has ever known. I am satisfied with the Tariff bill, as it now stands, and I think that almost every one else is. Congress is entitled to great credit for its work in that respect. I venture to predict that good times will last for many years."

Mrs. Corey, the former Mabelle Gilman the actress, will stay in Paris for the Summer and return to this country in September.

FELL WITH BLAZING BALLOON.

Aeronaut's Fireworks Set His Gas Bag Aflame.

An ascension made by John Ackerman, the 22-year-old balloonist of Bayonne Park, Bayonne, N. J., late Monday afternoon, though it didn't end in his falling a thousand feet in his blazing balloon as extensively reported yesterday, was thrilling enough.

The aeronant went up 1,000 feet amid a blaze of glory thrown about by the rockets, roman candles, and bombs he exploded, and then fell from that height with the gas bag flaming behind him. The accident happened in this way: The balloon started before he was quite ready, and went up pitching and turning each moment over Newark Bay off Bayonne Park. The hundreds of spectators feared an accident from the first.

At the height of 300 feet the gas bag gave a great lurch sideways, and people saw a little spurt of flame along it. Instantly the whole bag was ablaze as the torrent of escaping gas poured about it. It fell quickly, as Ackerman hung from the basket and twisted at the parachute ropes. When 200 feet above the bay, considerably scorched by the flames, he got the parachute free and dropped.

But he dropped like a stone—the parachute did not open—and he struck the water with a great spash, and sank beneath it. Launches at once put out to help him. When they got to the place where he had struck they found him swimming, though dazed, and took him to the nearest hotel. After a night's sleep he was in good shape again.

SHE BURIED A STRANGER.

James Hoover Comes Home to Find Wife in Mourning for Him.

"Who are you in mourning for," said James P. Hoover when he walked into his home at 254 Neilson Street, New Brunswick, N. J., Monday night after an absence of six weeks.

Mrs. Hoover almost swooned, but managed to gasp: "Why, I buried you in Staten Island two weeks ago!"

"Well, I've just landed a job at Westfield," said Hoover, "and I guess I'd better go back to earn the funeral expenses." He started out yesterday to take the job.

Hoover, who was formerly a Pennsylvania Railroad fireman, left home June 7. A body answering his description was found floating on June 26 in Prince's Bay, Staten Island. Mrs. Hoover positively identified it as that of her husband, and had it buried.

Hoover had been in the habit of going away for days at a time looking for work, but his last absence was so long that his wife thought he must be dead. When he returned Monday he said that he had been in Westfield, Newark, and other places hunting a job, and had finally landed one.

The supposed widow had taken steps to collect her husband's insurance, when he reappeared.

TO STRIKE TO RETAIN HOMES.

Pittsburg & Lake Erie Men Resist Order to Change Headquarters.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., July 13.—Orders given by the New York Central officials to move the headquarters of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie employes from McKees Rocks to Newell, Penn., a distance of fifteen miles, will on next Monday result in a complete tie-up of the Pittsburg end of the New York Central, according to an ultimatum of the engineers and firemen to-day to the officials.

The officials are seriously considering the advisability to-night of countermanding the order. It was at the urgent request of Pittsburg & Lake Erie officials that the strike was not declared for to-morrow morning. The workmen have consented to wait until Monday. In the meantime the matter is being taken up in the New York offices.

The engineers and firemen started the trouble. The main line of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie runs from Pittsburg to Youngstown, Ohio, a distance of fifty-eight miles, while the Monongahela Valley Division runs about an equal distance up the Monongahela River. The McKees Rocks headquarters for trainmen is just outside Pittsburg on the main line, and has been there since the road was first built. Many of the 2,000 workmen own their own homes there. They say that they will lose a great deal of money should they be forced to move their place of residence.

JOKE SHOOTING MORTAL.

Revolver Pointed by Clark at His Cousin's Hat Kills Her.

Mrs. Mary Foreman of 826 Washington Street died last evening in St. Vincent's Hospital as the result of a shot fired by her cousin, John Clark, on Friday night. The shooting was said by the family and friends to have been a joke. Mrs. Foreman brought home a new hat Friday night and showed it to Clark, who lives at the same address, asking his opinion of it.

He had been cleaning a revolver that belonged to a boarder, and which he supposed to be unloaded. He replied, according to the stories told the police: "Oh, shoot the hat," with the weapon aimed at Mrs. Foreman. A bullet entered Mrs. Foreman's nose and went down into her throat. It was at first thought she would recover, but she died.

Clark was arrested and released next day in Jefferson Market Police Court in $500 bail on a charge of felonious assault. When Coroner Harburger heard of Mrs. Foreman's death last night he ordered the police of the Charles Street Station to rearrest Clark on a charge of homicide and will give the prisoner a hearing this morning.

PASS BUILDING CODE IN STORMY SESSION

Alderman T. P. Sullivan Puts Through the Tammany Measure Despite a Lively Fight.

THE VOTE WAS 40 TO 38

Alderman Doull Loses a Valiant Struggle for the Minority Report of the Revision Commission.

The much-criticised revised Building Code was adopted by the Aldermen yesterday through the engineering of Alderman Timothy P. Sullivan and his assistants. It was a tight squeeze, and if any one of a number of things had happened the passage of the code would have been blocked. Alderman Doull, the leader of the minority of the Revision Commission, who has been fighting for weeks against the adoption of the majority report, strived hard and ably yesterday, backed by all the Republican members of the board, except one, and the McCarren members.

Before the voting started it looked as if the opposition had a very good chance of downing Tammany. "Little Tim," who occupied the chair as Vice Chairman, President McGowan being Acting Mayor in the absence of Mayor McClellan, was clearly worried. But none of his plans went wrong, and the code was put through by a vote of 40 to 38.

The Tammany members of the board voted solidly for the new code with the exception of Aldermen Doull, Reardon, who comes from the bailiwick of Maurice Featherson, who has not been in line in Tammany Hall for some time, and Mulligan, who was originally elected to the Board on the Municipal Ownership ticket and was given a re-election by Tammany on account of his strength in his district.

The twenty-four Republicans supported the minority report in a body with the exception of Alderman Schloss, from Abe Gruber's district, one of the most important on the west side. The eight McCarren men backed Alderman Doull solidly. President Gresser of Queens and four of the five men from that borough also voted with the minority, Quinn, Emener, Flanagan, and Carter. The latter is a Republican. The other man from Queens, Hogan, is a Cassidy man, and voted with Tammany. President Cromwell of Richmond, who is a Republican, followed his party, but the three Staten Island Aldermen stayed with the majority. President Coler created a surprise by voting with Tammany. It had been vaguely expected that he would give his vote to the minority.

Little attention was paid to the business of the early part of the session, and when Alderman Kenneally, the representative of Charles F. Murphy's home district in the board and the leader of the majority of the Revision Commission, arose and moved the adoption of the majority report of the Buildings Committee, there was a suppressed sigh of relief.

Doull was on his feet at once and moved the substitution of the minority report. He also asked that it be read. Out of courtesy, "Little Tim" directed that this be done. The report condemned the provisions of the majority report requiring a certain method of standpipe protection in office buildings, granting "wide discretionary powers to the Superintendent of Buildings," restricting the use of cinder concrete fireproofing, and allowing "large, unbroken floor areas in non-fireproof buildings." The majority was congratulated on the elimination of the clause requiring the use of one particular kind of structural paint.

The voting then proceeded on the question of substitution. When Alderman Bent, a McCarren man, was reached in the roll call he made a speech in which he praised Alderman Doull glowingly, comparing him to the "Reggie" of old. Doull's first name is Reginald, and he is known to every one about the City Hall as "Reggie." It developed that his predecessor in the eyes of Bent was none other than Regulus.

Alderman Brown, the Republican floor leader, in voting for the minority report, also attacked the code severly. "The Republican side of the Chamber feels that politics should play no part in the revision of a Building Code," said he, "and we must take a decided stand in this matter. We were not consulted in any way in the drawing of these provisions. The document is purely a Democratic measure. There is nothing nearer to every man than his home, and this means the house that he lives in. There have been rumors of scandal in this code. These should be investigated thoroughly. I believe for one thing that too great discretionary powers are granted to the Superintendent of Buildings in the code. Is Tammany figuring that if a fusion Mayor is elected its Borough President can still do what he pleases?"

Alderman Downing, Republican, declared that the majority of the Buildings Committee had refused to consider certain requests for amendments to the code made by Brooklyn building interests. Alderman Gunther, the Republican leader, took up the same point. "The Chairman of the committee either willfully misled these Brooklyn interests when he promised to consider their suggestions or he willfully lied," he declared.

"The Alderman should know better than to use such language as that," rebuked "Little Tim."

"Nevertheless, it is true," replied Gunther.

"Such language should be used outside, and I submit that as a suggestion."

"Nevertheless, it is true," reiterated Gunther. "This code grants a monopoly to hollow tile fireproofing, and to Portland cement."

There was a spirited interchange between Aldermen Doull and T. P. Sullivan over a question of privilege, and a declaration by Alderman Redmond of Brooklyn protesting against the provision for twelve-inch walls in detached two-story houses, and then the code was adopted.

It was announced last night that a mass meeting would be held next week by the interests which have opposed the provisions of the code to protest against the Mayor signing it.

LEAVES ALL TO HIS FRIEND.

Old German Exile's Fortune Goes to His Personal Attendant.

By the will of Bruno Weber of 243 East Fifty-ninth Street, who died on June 28, filed for probate yesterday, all his property goes to his "loved and trusted friend," Romano Ebert of 306 West 128th Street, and he is made sole executor without bond. There were no papers filed to show the exact value of the estate, but it is understood that Mr. Weber owned two apartment houses in Fifty-ninth Street and had considerable personal property.

Weber, it is said, was compelled to flee from Germany in 1849 because of revolutionary troubles there. He came to this country in 1852.

Ebert, the sole beneficiary, filed an affidavit which stated that Weber had told him that his father had died shortly after he left Germany and that he had no brothers nor sisters and had never married; also that he had never communicated with any relatives or friends in Germany. Ebert said that he had at one time acted as Weber's collector and later became his personal attendant.

The will was executed on July 26, 1900.

Starts a Fight for Cheaper Ice.

The Frank Joyce Association, which has taken up several civic problems affecting the upper west side, held a meeting last night at its rooms, 621 Ninth Avenue, to consider what could be done about the high price of ice. The meeting was attended by 200 persons, who adopted a set of resolutions saying that ice, which is an essential to the poor, has doubled in price. The resolution asks the people and the press to take up the fight for cheaper ice.

ASTOR ROOF GARDEN OPEN.

Many Tables Reserved for Dinner Parties in the Open Air.

The new Belvedere Restaurant on the roof of the Hotel Astor was opened to the public for the first time last night, and was crowded throughout the evening. A specially selected orchestra furnished the music.

Among those who reserved tables and gave supper parties were Mr. and Mrs. G. Frederick Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo De Paul, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Trowbridge, Frederic G. Potter, J. D. Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bell, Senator Thomas F. Grady, Frank McKee, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Satterlee, Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Slade, F. R. Mollenhauer, James F. Handy, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Jones, G. De Mercado, H. S. Higgins, A. Luchow, John K. MacGowan, and Mr. and Mrs. F. T. White.

The new roof contains, besides the Belvedere Restaurant, the rose garden, the palm garden, and a promenade a quarter of a mile in extent overlooking every part of the city. Many new features have been added, including a flag gallery, which contains the flags of every nation. Each of these as it is displayed from the two-ton steel flagpole will be illuminated by two powerful searchlights, and will be visible for miles. An icemaking machine, which produces a nine-ton iceberg for use on the roof, is another innovation. In the Winter the Belvedere Restaurant will be inclosed with glass and heated by steam, so that it will serve in the capacity of a Winter solarium. The roof as now enlarged has room to accommodate more than 5,000 guests.

DISPUTE OVER KNAPP ESTATE.

Mrs. J. Noble Emly Wants an Accounting of Her Father's Estate.

Dissension has arisen in the family of the late Sheppard Knapp, the carpet manufacturer, who died Oct. 26, 1906, over his estate, which is reckoned between $300,000 and $400,000.

One of his daughters, Mrs. J. Noble Emly, through her husband, a lawyer of 15 William Street, applied yesterday to Surrogate Cohalan for an accounting of the estate. Mrs. Sarah Knapp, her mother, is named as executrix in the petition, but the people who represent her seem to be Hiram Knapp, her son, and Mrs. E. D. Tucker, one of her daughters-in-law.

Mrs. Emly wants to know just what is going on in the estate, to part of which she has title, although she has consented to the payment of her share of the income to her mother. Mr. Emly stated in court yesterday that his wife has no knowledge of the way in which the property is being administered, although Mr. Hiram Knapp and Mr. Tucker have a large control, as the first is President and the second Secretary in the old Knapp Company, wherein most of the principal ilies, and both are powerful stockholders. He added that his wife had long been trying to get an accounting, but the only one she received was in certain items incorrect.

The defense, on the other hand, contended that the application was merely an attempt to get at the principal of the estate.

THREE HURT IN A COLLISION.

Cab, Automobile, and Delivery Wagon in a General Smash.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Williams, living at the Hotel Navarre, and Richard Blake of 312 West Twenty-fifth Street, employed as a cab driver on the Pennsylvania Railroad cab lines, were taken to New York Hospital last evening, the husband and wife painfully injured about the body, and Blake badly bruised in the right hip.

The injuries were sustained when the cab in which the man and wife were riding, driven by Blake, was mixed up in a collision with a delivery wagon and an automobile in Seventh Avenue, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth Streets. The delivery wagon is owned by Frank Fisco, a butcher, of 162 Sullivan Street, and Fisco was driving at the time of the accident.

The automobile was in charge of Thomas Lanahan of 676 Ninth Avenue, employed as a chauffeur by William Hart of 135 Broadway. In the machine with Lanahan were Daniel McFadden, his son, Daniel McFadden, Jr., and Maurice Quinlan, all of whom live at the same address as the chauffeur.

According to the police the collision was due to Blake's overzealous efforts to drive ahead of Fisco, behind whom he had been driving for about a block.

Fisco escaped injury, and there were no arrests.

TELEPHONE SUITS IN COURT.

Independent Co. Loses Appeal—Public Service Co.'s Case Adjourned.

The appeal of the New York Independent Telephone Company for permission to place telephone wires under the streets of the city was denied yesterday by the Appellate Division. In refusing permission, Justice Clarke says the company merged with the Mercantile Electric Company in 1903, and now claims a right to lay wires under the franchise of a concern organized for a burglar alarm business.

When the adjourned motion in the matter of the Public Service Telephone Company against the Empire City Subway Company, Ltd., was called by Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday, it was announced by Edmund L. Mooney, counsel for the Empire City Company, that at the request of the Public Service Company, the application for a mandamus compelling the Empire Company to allow the telephone company the use of their ducts, and the motion of the city to be allowed to intervene in the action, be adjourned until the first Monday in October.

The Public Service Company contends that it has a 999-year franchise from the city, but Corporation Counsel Pendleton says that under the recent law a franchise cannot last beyond twenty-five years.

CAR KILLS GIRL AT PLAY.

Police Reserves Out to Protect the Motorman from an Angry Crowd.

Five-year-old Dorothy Brush, leaving her two elder sisters, Annie, six years old, and Elsie, eight, to cross the street in front of her home at 457 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, yesterday, ran in front of a westbound Bergen Street car. She was run over and killed before the motorman, James Lacey of 178 Albany Avenue, could bring the car to a stop. The little girl, at play with her sisters, had been warned by Elsie to keep off the car tracks. Her danger was not noticed by the other children or by the motorman until the car was almost on her.

When the car struck the child, her clothing caught in the brake and in this way she was dragged down toward the forward trucks. One of the wheels passed over her neck. Several workmen engaged in repairing the tracks nearby had to raise the car before the girl's body could be got out from under the wheels.

Capt. Hayes of the Bergen Street Station was on the steps of his precinct building when he heard the screams of the children a block away, as they saw the little girl run over by the car. He sent the reserves there to keep order. They prevented an angry crowd from carrying out threats against the motorman, until he was finally taken to the station house and locked up there on a technical charge of homicide.

Drink Frisco's Health in October.

Through a typographical error, THE TIMES announced last week that the people of the City of New York had been invited to drink the health of San Francisco at noon on July 19. It should be Oct. 19. The occasion is the first day of a mammoth festival to be held in San Francisco from Oct. 19 to 23 in honor of the 140th anniversary of the discovery of the Golden Gate by Gaspar de Portola and the rebuilding of the city. New York is the first city to which the invitation has been extended. This is in recognition of this city's generous contributions to San Francisco after the earthquake.

WOODRUFF'S TICKET MUST PASS MUSTER

If It Doesn't the Hundred Will Run a Full Ticket of Its Own.

TO GIVE FORMAL WARNING

Committee Learned That Republican Leaders Had Determined to Nominate a Machine Man.

Unless the Republican organization nominates candidates for offices on the municipal ticket this Fall who meet with the approval of the Committee of One Hundred, that organization will place a ticket of its own in the field and carry the fight into every district. This would mean three tickets and a practical assurance of victory for Tammany Hall.

This decision, which virtually amounts to a reversal of the original attitude assumed by the Committee of One Hundred, was reached during the several meetings held by the Executive Committee of that body in the last three weeks. The matter will be placed before the full committee at the meeting to-morrow afternoon. It is likely that a formal announcement outlining this new policy will be made after the meeting.

When the Committee of One Hundred entered the field of municipal politics, announcement was made that it probably would confine its efforts to an educational propaganda and a censorship over the nominations made by both the leading parties. It is still the desire of a majority of the members to thus limit the work of the committee.

But recently statements have emanated from the Republican camp which have convinced the leaders of the Committee of One Hundred that Parsons and Woodruff practically have agreed to dictate the anti-Tammany nominations and to pay little heed to what the committee may have to say on the subject of candidates.

Somehow the impression has been created among the Republican leaders that rather than divide the anti-Tammany forces the Committee of One Hundred would fall in line for any ticket the civic zeal of Parsons and Woodruff might prompt them to place before the voters.

This idea was rudely shattered by an authoritative statement made at the headquarters of the Committee of One Hundred last night.

"We are going to see that every voter in New York City will have the opportunity to vote for an honest and capable man for every office," ran the statement. "We are for fusion and for active co-operation between all the anti-Tammany forces, and we hope that this may be brought about with a minimum of friction in the preliminaries. But we will not permit the committee to be placed in a position where it can be sold out. Unless the Republicans nominate men who will meet with the approval of this committee, we are prepared to place a ticket in the field ourselves from Mayor to Aldermen and go in and work for its election."

Both President Parsons, of the New York County Republican Committee and Republican State Chairman Woodruff, who will dominate the Kings and Queens end of the Republican City Convention, have declared themselves absolutely opposed to any candidate for Mayor except a straight organization Republican. They will heed no representations from the Committee of One Hundred or any other anti-Tammany force that may enter the fusion conference in regard to any candidate for Mayor who does not fill this qualification.

Parsons and Woodruff, having in mind the experience of the Republican machine when Seth Low was Mayor, and that the political faith of a prospective appointee for office had no weight so long as he was fit in other respects, are out for a man to head the ticket whom they can control when it comes to a question of patronage.

On the other hand, it may be stated on the best of authority that a candidate of that description will not prove acceptable to the Committee of One Hundred. For that reason, largely, the committee has decided to abdicate no function, from the education of voters to the nomination of candidates, which generally falls within the province of an organization of its kind about election time.

For the present no overt steps toward building up an organization will be taken by the Committee of One Hundred. That body has already made plans which will monopolize all its activities and funds until Sept. 1. About that time the fusion conferences in all probability will begin. But it was said at the headquarters in the Beaver Building that in its membership the committee represented practically every Assembly district in the five boroughs, and that it would be a comparatively easy matter to build up district organizations when the fusion programme had failed.

"And the committee in its membership does not represent the full force of the active co-operation it could muster for that purpose either," said a member of the Executive Committee. "There are other forces which already have an organization and to certain extent a machinery and which stand pledged to support the Committee of One Hundred in the policy outlined should the proposed fusion arrangement with the Republicans come to naught."

When asked whether the placing in the field of an independent ticket by the Committee of One Hundred would not mean a Tammany victory, this member said that while it would spell certain defeat for the Republican candidates it would not necessarily mean success for Tammany Hall.

"We expect when the campaign gets hot and the issues are discussed to cause as much of a defection in the Tammany ranks as did Hearst in the campaign of 1905, and he came within 3,000 votes of winning after a three weeks' campaign on which he started without even a skeleton organization," said the member.

FLOOD HELD 60,000 IN KANSAS CITY

Many of Them Women with Only Enough Money for a Normal Journey.

CONDITIONS BETTER NOW

Traffic Being Resumed — Mississippi Continues to Rise at St. Louis — Crop Damage in Indiana.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 13.—Union Station officials estimated to-day that within the last six days there have been fully 60,000 travelers held in Kansas City because of inefficient train service due to the high water. From last night until this morning it is estimated that there were 20,000 persons in the Union Station. The majority of these were persons going to other points and forced to wait here because of their inability to make train connections.

Many of them were women who were traveling with barely enough money to see them through their journey. The delay compelled them to remain here, and many have not sufficient funds to pay for food and lodging. Hundreds have slept on the station benches every night. In the more urgent cases Mrs. Everyingham, the station matron, has solicited money with which to buy food. The railroad permitted passengers to remain in sleeping cars instead of going to hotels in the vicinity of the Union Station, already crowded.

The train service to-day was nearer normal than it has been at any time since the flood began. With a few exceptions the roads out of Kansas City were using their own tracks. The crowds which have thronged the station since the train service was interrupted were reduced fully one-half. This was partly due to the fact that fewer persons are traveling, but another reason is that more trains are being operated, and thousands of travelers who have been held here for days were able to get away.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé opened its main line to Chicago this morning. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway sent a special to Chicago over its own lines.

C. G. Kline, a Santa Fé conductor, who arrived here to-day, says that his train started a week ago on its usual run between Kansas City and Fort Madison, Iowa. His train went to Chicago, used three railroads in getting there, and in all traversed 1,000 miles. The Santa Fé's distance to Chicago is 458 miles.

The rivers are now falling and there is no indication of further floods. Weather Observer Conner says the crest of the flood has been reached. Reports from stations in the Kansas River watershed are also reassuring.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 13.—The Mississippi River continued rising here to-day and early this morning the gauge stood at 33.4. The flood stage is thirty feet. Water has entered many buildings on the levee, but ample warning prevented serious damage to stocks.

The greatest damage has been to crops along the Missouri River between Jefferson City and St. Charles, where thousands of acres of rich farm lands have been flooded and the crops destroyed.

The Government bureau predicts that the water will reach 34.5 feet here on Thursday.

PRINCETON, Ind., July 13.—The rain and wind storm last night caused many thousands of dollars' damage to growing crops in Southwestern Indiana.

CUTTING TO LEAVE TANGIER.

Secretary of American Legation Resigns Owing to Illness.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Because of ill health W. Bayard Cutting, Jr., Secretary of the American Legation at Tangier, Morocco, has tendered his resignation to the Secretary of State, and it has been accepted.

Mr. Cutting served as Vice and Deputy Consul at Milan in 1908, and has been stationed at Tangier since March 1 last. Following the recent earthquake at Messina Mr. Cutting rendered valuable services in helping to relieve the stricken people.

SUFFRAGETTES WON'T EAT.

Refuse to Wear Prison Garb or Refrain from Talking in Jail.

LONDON, July 13.—The suffragettes who were sent to Holloway Jail yesterday not only refuse to eat, but also decline persistently to change their street clothes for the prison garb.

The rules of silence also are ignored, and there is a general revolt against the attempt to treat them as ordinary criminals.

REBEL FORCES ENTER FEZ.

Roghi's Followers Reported in Moroccan Capital—Sultan's Fate Unknown.

MADRID, July 13.—A despatch from Tetuan says that Roghi, leader of the rebellious tribesmen, has forced an entry into Fez. His followers pillaged the stores, and many of the merchants fled to Mequinez.

The fate of Mulai Hafid is unknown.

AGAINST UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

House of Lords Rejects Bill Introduced by Lord Roberts.

LONDON, July 13.—The House of Lords, by a vote of 123 to 103, decided to-night not to proceed with the National Service bill, which Lord Roberts introduced in the House yesterday.

This bill provides for the compulsory service in the territorial army of all male citizens between the ages of 18 and 30.

DICKENS CHAIR BRINGS £74.

Bought by Essler of Philadelphia—Tennyson's Works Go Cheap.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—The favorite chair of Charles Dickens, in which he was photographed many times at Gadshill, was sold at auction at Sotheby's to-day, and Charles S. Essler of Philadelphia, a dealer in rare books, was the purchaser. The price was £74, and there was but one other bidder.

Mr. Essler will take it to America, and says he does not care whether he resells it or not. He bought also several autograph letters on literary subjects by Dickens at very moderate prices.

In view of the proximity of Tennyson's centenary it is rather surprising that several first editions of that poet's early writings went for comparatively small sums. A copy of the original edition of a little volume fathered by Alfred and Charles Tennyson jointly in 1827 brought only £15.

BUELOW NAMES BETHMANN.

Kaiser Expected to Confirm Him as Chancellor—Reichstag Adjourned.

BERLIN, July 13.—Prince Bülow, the retiring imperial Chancellor, will formally propose, in his audience with Emperor William to-morrow, that he be succeeded by Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Secretary of the Interior and Vice Chancellor. There is reason to believe that his Majesty will accept this proposal, and that the appointment will be gazetted at once. In the remote contingency that his Majesty does not accept Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, Prince Bülow will be permitted to make another suggestion.

In the Reichstag to-day Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, as the representative of Chancellor Bülow, read a decree from the Emperor closing the present session of the House, which will not reassemble until next Autumn.

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg is a college friend of the Emperor. They were fraternity brothers in the Borussia Corps at Bonn, and during the entire reign of the Kaiser Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg has often advised his Majesty.

He is of Jewish origin, and is now fifty-three years old. Before he was thirty he had been made District Governor of Oberbernim, and later he became Provincial President of Potsdam, where he saw much of Emperor William.

Following his sojourn at Potsdam, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg's promotion was rapid. He became President of the Government of Bromberg and President of the province of Brandenburg, from which post he took up the portfolio of Prussian Minister of the Interior. He then followed Posadowsky as Imperial Minister.

ARGENTINE MINISTER LEAVES.

Wife Takes Refuge in Barracks Because of Hostility in La Paz.

BUENOS AYRES, July 13.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs has received a telegram from Señor Fonseca, Argentine Minister at La Paz, announcing that he has left that city. The telegram adds that hostile demonstrations against Argentina and Peru continue and that Mme. Fonseca was obliged to take refuge in the artillery barracks.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 13.—Conditions were quieter to-day at La Paz, the anger of the people being somewhat appeased by the Government's refusal to accept Argentina's decision in the arbitration of the boundary dispute on the ground that territory which Peru never occupied is recognized by the award as belonging to Peru.

The populace, fearing a war and scarcity of provisions, are buying heavily. Many Peruvians are leaving the country, the Peruvian Government paying their expenses.

OSKAR ROTHSCHILD A SUICIDE.

Member of Austrian Branch of Family Had Unfortunate Love Affair.

VIENNA, July 13.—Baron Oskar Rothschild, the youngest son of Albert Rothschild, head of the Austrian branch of the Rothschild house, committed suicide by shooting in his father's palace last night because of an unfortunate love affair.

He was 21 years old. He returned to Vienna two days ago after eight months spent in travel, during which he visited the United States.

Members of the Rothschild family deny that he committed suicide. They say his death was caused by apoplexy.

ADANA OFFICIALS TO BE TRIED.

Charged with Complicity in Armenian Massacres Last April.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 13.—An imperial irade issued to-day orders the trial by court-martial of Djevad Bey, ex-Vali of Adana; Moustapha Pasha, the military commander at Adana, and Yousseff Bey, Governor of Jebelibreket, in the vilayet of Adana.

They are charged with being implicated in the Armenian massacres of last April.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

PEKING, July 13.—Germany has joined the United States, Great Britain, and Austria-Hungary in notifying China that she does not recognize the preliminary agreement between Russia and China devised for the administration of the Russian railroad area in Manchuria.

AMOY, China, July 13.—It is officially reported to-day that 174 deaths from the bubonic plague and 36 deaths from cholera have occurred here during the two weeks ended last Monday.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 13.—Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador at Washington, arrived here to-day from New York.

TOLEDO, Spain, July 13.—Seventy-two guests who sat down at a private dinner in Toledo last night were poisoned by the ice cream served them, and to-day the condition of the majority is described as serious.

COPENHAGEN, July 13.—The Danish Government has decided not to send a ship to the Hudson-Fulton celebration to be held in New York this Fall.

LAGOS, British West Africa, July 13.—The native chief of the town of Oyo, in Nigeria, has sent a letter to the American missionaries notifying them that if they desire to return they must enter into a written agreement not to interfere with his methods in governing his people.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN DRUG FIRM SUIT

Court Allows Park Concern to Amend Its Complaint to Ask Higher Damages.

SAY TRADE IS RESTRICTED

Plaintiff Firm Alleges Druggists' Association Keeps a List of Firms to Which Goods May Be Sold.

Permission was granted to J. D. Park & Son, wholesale and manufacturing druggists of Cincinnati, Ohio, yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Blanchard in an action brought by them against members of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association to serve a supplemental amended complaint fixing the alleged damages at $3,500,000, instead of $500,000, the amount demanded when the suit was first begun in 1897. Alton B. Parker is counsel for the plaintiff.

The defendant firms, which include some of the most prominent drug houses between the Eastern and Western coasts, are Brun Ritchey & Co., the Charles M. Crittenton Company, Lehn Fink, C. W. Littell & Co., Schieffelin & Co., George B. Hubbard, C. W. Snow & Co., and the Coffin-Reddington Company.

The plaintiff firm, in its complaint in the action which has been before both the State and United States courts many times since 1897, with decisions for both sides, alleges that the members of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, including the defendants, sought to limit and restrict the wholesale and jobbing drug trade. Previous to 1907 they assert that the association restricted the trade by means of a rebate or contract plan, whereby the manufacturers adopted measures for the sale of their goods to certain wholesale jobbing druggists, to be designated by a committee on proprietary goods named by the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, of which, it is alleged, the defendants were members. This committee, it is held, were to draw up certain lists, one to be known as a "cut-off" list, the other as a "white list"; the one to be allowed goods, the other to be refused. The "tripartite," the plaintiff alleges, was adopted as an extreme of an old plan and a more perfect accomplishment of their plans or purposes.

In the supplemental amended complaint Park & Son held they have arrived at the amount of their damages from an examination of their books and figuring upon conditions which might have existed were it not for the action of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association. Their specific demands for damages range from $50,000, which profit they say they lost in profits in goods of their own manufacture, to a $1,500,000 claim, on the ground that many of their customers, believing they would be blacklisted if they did business with them, refused to buy.

LOVE AFFAIR DRIVES HER MAD.

Tessie Nagey Tries to Choke Brother and Attacks Surgeon.

Tessie Nagey, a Hungarian servant, who for several weeks has been boarding in the home of her married brother at 1,031 Manhattan Avenue, Williamsburg, became violently insane yesterday morning and tried to choke her brother. She began to show symptoms of a deranged mind last month, and her relatives believe that her condition was brought on by disappointment in a love affair.

Early yesterday morning while her brother was watching her she suddenly attacked him. He shouted for help, and neighbors who rushed in had considerable difficulty in rescuing him. An ambulance was summoned from the Eastern District Hospital, and while Dr. Zahler was attending the girl she jumped at him.

He could not take her to the hospital because its only padded cell was occupied, and so the young woman was carried in a police patrol wagon to the King's County Hospital and put in the observation ward.

JAPANESE LABORERS JAILED.

Prisoners Taken to Honolulu from Plantation Where Riot Occurred.

HONOLULU, July 13.—Eighteen Japanese prisoners were brought in from the Waimanalo plantation, eighteen miles from here, last night, and lodged in the city jail, where they will probably be charged with resisting an officer as a result of the riot that occurred at the plantation yesterday.

Two hundred strikers were holding a meeting when the police left with their prisoners, but a telephone message from County Sheriff Jarrett late last night said that everything was quiet at the plantation, and he did not expect further trouble.

All of the striking laborers at the Waimanalo plantation returned to work to-day.

MOTHER SEES BOY KILLED.

Car Ran Over Him as He Crossed the Street Before His Home.

Six-year-old Martin Sylvander and his mother were sitting on the stoop of the Sylvander home, 1,219 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, last night, at 6:30 o'clock. The boy asked his mother to let him go to Irving Park. She consenting, he started across the street.

A Halsey Street trolley car came rushing along at that moment, struck the boy down, and ran over him. His mother, who saw the boy fall, fainted. He was taken out from under the car so injured that he died at the German Hospital.

Patrick Egan of 279 Marion Street, Brooklyn, the motorman, was locked up in the Hamburg Avenue Station charged with homicide, though he had tried to stop the car.

S. F. LAIRD, JR., A BANKRUPT.

Cora Sinclair Recently Won a $15,000 Verdict Against Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Samuel F. Laird, Jr., of Mount Airy, against whom Cora Cinclair, whom he called his "Little Sandsnipe," obtained a verdict of $15,000 for breach of promise in the New York courts recently, was adjudged a voluntary bankrupt in the United States District Court to-day.

Laird says his liabilities are $15,790, which is said to be the amount of the verdict given against him, with interest. His assets were given as $1,032.50. Laird is a son of a prominent shoe manufacturer of this city.

Laird is married and his wife stated after the verdict that her husband did not have that much money. Mrs. Laird stood by her husband in the trial and she said that it was almost impossible for a stranger to obtain justice in New York.

MORE IMPEACH GINGLES GIRL.

Her Accuser at Theatre at Time of Alleged Attack, Friend Testifies.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Wrangling of lawyers and further testimony to impeach Ella Gingles's story of alleged torture in a bathroom of the Wellington Hotel on Feb. 16 marked the closing hours to-day of the State's case against the young lacemaker for larceny of lace from Miss Agnes Barrette, her former employer. Assistant State's Attorney B. J. Short announced at night that he would conclude with a few witnesses in the morning. The case probably will reach the jury by Friday evening.

An alibi was furnished for Miss Barrette, proprietor of a lace store in the Wellington Hotel, who is accused by Miss Gingles of being the moving spirit in the plot to lead her into white slavery.

Miss Mary Hale, proprietor of a hairdressing parlor, told of meeting Miss Barrette the evening of Feb. 16, and of attending the theatre with her. Later, she said, they went to Miss Barrette's room and went to bed.

There was further evidence to show that Miss Gingles's story was not true, and that her wounds had been self-inflicted.

REDLEGS SUFFER FOR THE PIRATES' GREED

Giants Whale Clarke Griffith's Cincinnati Mon by a Scoro of 8 to 4.

HIT CAMPBELL 15 TIMES

Ames Allows Nine Raps, Including a Homer, but Is Steady in Pinches —Buckeye Boys Unteamy.

Redland's representatives yesterday afternoon opened a four-day engagement on the Polo Grounds in "A Study in Scarlet" a problem play. McGraw's men, who are great little guessers if you give them the right initials, submitted as their solution of the first part of the problem the sentence, "New York, 8; Cincinnati, 4." It was a missing run contest, for the Reds on two occasions, with tallies all but in, couldn't find the key to Leon Ames's cryptic twirling, a pop-up killing thier first chance, a strike-out the second. The Giants missed a couple of opportunities, too, but not until they had a safe lead and Manager McGraw was enjoying a comfortable chat with the groundkeeper. Clark Griffith, pilot of the Porkopolitans, trotted out all his coaching tricks behind third baser going the limit in efforts to rattle Ames, but the only time he got Leon nervous was on what should have been the last out of the game, when the boxman muffed Tenney's throw from Downey's grounder. And, though that filled the bases with a pinch hitter up, it made no difference, since Ames steadied himself immediately and fanned Paskert before that young man fully realized he was at the bat."

It was a one-sided game—much more so than the errors show. The Giants played with something like their old vim, whereas the Reds, though ambitious enough, were unteamy in the field and unreliable at bat. Ames held the Westerners hitless for the first three rounds. He allowed them eight raps altogether in the fourth, fifth, and sixth chapters, but kept the screws on so tightly that, even with a homer, the best they could do in any inning was two tallies. The McGrawites pounded Campbell four times for as many counts in the beginning—the second—and in the fourth they made a brace of bingles, aided by errors, good for two more runs. In the entire game they hammered the Buckeye pitcher fifteen times for nineteen bases.

Arthur Devlin was the white-haired boy in the batting line. In five times up he stripped off two singles, a double, and a triple. To his dying day Arthur will believe Umpire Rigler robbed him of a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes, a box of cigars, and all the other emoluments to be earned by a swing for the circuit. In the eighth round, with Murray on first, he sent the sphere to far right centre and sped along the alley in hot pursuit of Red. Oakes had a little private Marathon to recover the ball, and turned it into a relay race when he whipped it to Hoblitzell, who had hastened down the infield without tripping over his name. A few of his superfluous consonants, however, must have twined themselves about the first baseman's arm, for his throw to the plate was not the superlative of speed. Meanwhile, Devlin was burning up the last path, and as McLean caught the ball and wheeled for a put-out, Arthur slid. It was a lightning slide, and the runner certainly touched the plate before the big backstop put the ball on him. But Mr. Rigler, standing behind McLean, and, therefore, not seeing clearly, assumed the play had been made and called Devlin out.

INTERMISSION.

When the adjectives were swept away Devlin was credited with a three-bagger, Murray with a run, and Rigler with felonious intent. Had the umpire seen that the play wasn't completed, unquestionably he'd have called the runner safe. Having ruled, he couldn't crawfish.

New York's four in the second were made on hits by O'Hara and Devlin, Bridwell's sacrifice, Schiel's walk, Ames's safety, Tenney's stroll, Doyle's sacrifice fly, and McCormick's single. The Giants' two in the fourth resulted from Tenney's leaguer, an error by Downey on Doyle's force hit that scored Fred and let Larry take second, Murray's rap, and a wild throw by McLean to catch Doyle off third, on which Larry got home. The fifth inning run was due to Devlin's double and sacrifices by Bridwell and Schiel.

Cincinnati got one in the fourth on Beecher's one-bagger and McCormick's error that made it good for two bases, Oakes's out at first, and Mitchell's hit. In the next round, the Ruddylegs scored twice on Lobert's single and Downey's homer to right centre. The visitors' last tally came from Egan's single over second with one down; Mitchell's duplicate drive, on which Egan was nalled at third by O'Hara's good throw to Devlin, the batter taking second on the play, and Hoblitzell's rap through short that brought Mitchell in. Pirates Cross Bridge and Win.

Fresh from their victorious engagement at the Polo Grounds the Pirates crossed the East River yesterday for a two-game series with the Brooklyns, and they made an auspicious start by taking the game by a score of 3 to 0. The suspense to the 6,000 "fans" was all over in one hour and thirty minutes, and there was very little for them to enthuse about. It was a one-sided contest from the time that Umpire O'Day called play until the finish. Pitcher Maddox holding the key to the situation. Only six Brooklynites got to first base in the nine innings, and but two reached second. On the other hand the National League leaders in all their strength took advantage of the limited opportunities offered them, and while they did not smash the ball all over the field, their seven hits, including two doubles by Storke, and the wild pitching of Hunter, were sufficient to win the game. The fielding of both teams was excellent, especially that of Wilson and Clement, who caught ten flies between them. The score:

YANKEES AND SOX SPLIT A "DOUBLE"

New York Wins First Game by 5 to 1 and Chicago Gets the Next, 6 to 2.

WALSH DRIVEN FROM BOX

Manning Also Sent to Cover in Two-thirds of an Inning—Warhop Pitches in Good Style.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Stallings's men recovered their grip this afternoon long enough to defeat the White Sox in the first half of a double-header by a score of 5 to 1, but they lost it promptly and the locals captured the second game on a 6 to 2 basis. However, the Yankees were elated over breaking even with Comiskey's crew, and it is said they have hopes of breaking into the first division again ere the end of the season. G. Tweedy Stallings is so modest he'd rather be No. 4 in that body than No. 1 in the second squad, and even Elberfeld shares that preference with him. Anyway, it is evident the team as a whole, despite discouragement, is resolved to put up the best brand of ball of which it is capable through the remainder of the season. It is more than possible that on their return home they will give Hilltop fans many enjoyable games.

It was a walkover for the Toppers, that first game They drove Walsh to cover at the end of the seventh, and got three hits and a run off Sutor in two rounds. Warhop pitched a great game for the visitors, holding the locals to four safeties. His control was not good, though, for he walked seven men and struck out only one. Almost flawless fielding helped him a lot.

Manning's career in the second game was shorter by far than Walsh's in the first. He lasted just two-thirds of an inning. Chicago got to him for a hit and four walks that spelled two runs, and when Doyle supplanted him the Sox negotiated another stroll and a single that meant three more tallies. The game was broken up in the opening chapter, and Smith kept the lid on the Hilltoppers with only a couple of lifts. The scores:

THE INCOME TAX AMENDMENT.

The joint resolution embodying the amendment to the Constitution empowering Congress to impose taxes on incomes without apportionment among the States according to population was passed by the Senate unanimously on July 5, and by the House, 317 to 14, on July 12, in the following form:

> Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of both houses concurring,) That the following section be submitted to the Legislatures of the several States, which when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States shall be valid and binding as a part of the Constitution of the United States:
>
> "The Congress shall have power to lay and collect direct taxes on incomes without apportionment among the several States according to population."

If this amendment to the Constitution shall be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States—failure to ratify by twelve States would defeat it—the nearest date on which an income tax law could take effect would be in 1911. It is much more probable that Congress would find itself unable to put the law into effect before the year 1912, two years and a half away.

Of the forty-six States of the Union only six have annual sessions of their Legislatures. These are Georgia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, and South Carolina. In only twelve of the States will there be legislative sessions during the year 1910. The Legislatures of Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, and Virginia will meet in January next; Louisiana will have a session in May, Georgia in June, and Vermont in October. The Legislatures of the other thirty-four States will meet in January, 1911.

Even if all these State Legislatures should act favorably and with the utmost promptness upon the amendment, the official certificates of ratification could hardly reach Congress before February, 1911. In that year Congress has a short session, ending on March 4. It will be seen that Congress, too, would have to act with unusual expedition to press an income tax bill to enactment before the day of adjournment. The measure will then be up on its merits. It will be stoutly opposed, and by Senators and Members who will be under no constraint to stifle their real convictions and vote for the bill, as was the case with so many Senators and Members who have just voted for the amendment resolution, not because they approved it, but because of tariff complications and to head off the immediate passage of the Cummins-Bailey income tax. Mr. ALDRICH will still be in the Senate; his term ends March 4, 1911. It would not be beyond his powers and the powers of those he could summon to his assistance, we fancy, to consume so much time in debate and amendment that the day of adjournment would find the bill still unperfected. An income tax bill is a pretty serious and important project of legislation. It would demand mature and deliberate consideration.

In that case the measure would go over to the joint session of the Sixty-second Congress, meeting on the first Monday in December, 1911. That would be a long session, and there would be time enough to wear out the opposition, if the majority was still bent upon laying an income tax. The corporation tax, as the amendment was passed, applies to the incomes of corporations earned in calendar years. The returns are to be made by the corporations to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue prior to March 1, stating the taxable income of the preceding calendar year. A notice of the amount of the tax payable will be given to each corporation before June 1, and the payment must be made before June 30. It may be assumed that a similar order of dates will be observed in taxing personal incomes.

It seems safe to say that if the amendment is ratified the law under it will not become operative before 1912, but Congress would doubtless provide that the assessments should be made upon incomes earned in the preceding year. 1911, just as the corporation tax is made applicable to incomes of the current year 1909. Meanwhile it remains to be determined whether the votes of the Legislatures of thirty-five States can be obtained in ratification of the constitutional amendment.

DEFYING THE CUSTOMS.

A great many persons who travel abroad retain, after many voyages and much bringing hither of foreign merchandise, a profound ignorance of customs rules and regulations. In the case of infraction of the rules reported in yesterday's newspapers, the lady who was so heavily fined clearly had not the slightest idea of defrauding the Government. She left her trunks on the pier in charge of a servant who was amply provided with money to pay the duties. But she had deliberately neglected to declare the dutiable goods she was carrying, and had written across the face of the blank form prepared for that purpose that she did not care to fill it out. If she had not taken the trouble to write that she might have escaped the heavy penalty exacted, (payment to the Government, besides the duties, of half the purchase price of the goods she had brought in,) on the ground of ignorance or innocent negligence. Declarations are often avoided by passengers, who escape the penalty for breaking the law because there is no evidence that their neglect was willful.

Yet there is slight excuse for ignorance of the United States customs regulation touching declaration by ocean travelers of dutiable goods in their luggage. Blank forms are distributed among the passengers of every steamship soon after it leaves the foreign port. The old annoyance of inquisition in the lower bay has been dispensed with. The rules of the customs, so far as they relate to private luggage, are simple enough to be comprehended by children, and they should be obeyed, for they are the law of the land.

THE CHAMPLAIN MONUMENT.

It having been decided that SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN shall have a monument, the next thing is to settle upon the site. Plattsburg and Burlington are said to want such an ornament, naturally enough, and for what are called "obvious reasons." There are obvious reasons why CHAMPLAIN did not discover those cities, and still more obvious reasons why a monument to be erected by New York and Vermont should not be placed to favor either State. The one which did not get the monument might lose its interest after the site was selected. Vermont's claim to provide the site, so far as it rests upon historical grounds, rests upon CHAMPLAIN'S landing at Isle la Motte, a position which he would scarcely have selected if he had known more about the lake which bears his name. The remoteness of this site does not commend it at the present time.

Gov. HUGHES is said to favor Four Brothers' Island. The site certainly is commanding, but it would hide the monument almost as well as Isle la Motte. Neither of these leading sites lends itself particularly to the lighthouse function of the monument. The point from which the greatest area of the lake can be seen by day, and whence the monument's light could be most widely visible at night, is Split Rock Point. That is about midway of the lake north and south, and is within a stone's throw of the border line of both States, thus giving each an approximately equal share in the structure erected by both. Moreover, it is on the line of travel, and the water is so deep there that the passengers on the lake boats could come close enough for the inscriptions to be read. CHAMPLAIN certainly discovered the entire lake rather than any particular point on which he placed his feet, and whatever point is selected should be so central and so accessible that the monument should be seen by as many as possible without a special pilgrimage. The local and commercial considerations now influencing the choice of location should not be allowed to be controlling.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN QUARREL.

Bolivia's surprise that the arbitral award of Argentina is adverse to Bolivia, and in favor of Peru, may explain but cannot excuse Bolivia's reluctance to abide by the award. The world has an interest in supporting all arbitral awards apart from the merits of any specific contention, and the United States as an American Nation has peculiar interest in throwing its moral influence against any action by any American nation which tends to weaken the cause of arbitration. The clear expression of this opinion is a duty incumbent upon all who would not see peace endangered by any weakening of the movement to impose upon nations the same duty of submission to law as is obligatory upon individuals.

Europe's acquiescence in Germany's recent support of Austria in flaunting defiance of European treaty obligations was too painful to the moral sense of the United States to permit any repetition of a like fault in this hemisphere if it can be prevented by the expression of that public opinion which is the sole sanction of international law. For itself the United States has nothing to hope from the establishment of law between American nations which would not be enjoyed by every other American nation, and in greater degree proportioned to the relative strength of the United States when compared with its weaker sisters. Possessing force adequate to make its will law, the United States has rivaled every other nation in the frequency with which it has submitted its claims to arbitration, and has accepted the award whatever its nature. The United States has a clear conscience to counsel others to do likewise, and is actuated by nothing but good-will in tendering this advice in the present controversy.

Bolivia's plea that it cannot consent to abide the loss of national territory is not admissible. That might perhaps have supported a refusal to arbitrate, for the right to go to war is a reserved right which cannot be taken away. Even individuals reserve the right of self-defense, and in urgent emergencies forcibly defend their lives and property in preference to litigating them. Nations have the same inalienable right, of which arbitration cannot and would not deprive them. But it is to be noted that individuals are reluctant to declare private and personal war in the manner of ruffians in proportion to their recognition of moral and social obligations. For example, during the current week members of a foreign Parliament exchanged insults which it seemed to them only blood could avenge. But they did not exchange shots at sight. Their seconds conferred, and decided that the principals were not justified in killing each other, and honor was satisfied.

Similarly, Bolivia's plea that national honor prevents acceptance of the award and requires resistance ought to be submitted to the calmer judgment of her nearest friends, and their counsel ought to be followed. It is the friendly opinion of the United States that Bolivia's honor is more concerned to uphold the award than to overthrow it. She pledged her faith when she submitted her case, and her honor is rooted in dishonor if she breaks her pledge. She accepted Argentina as arbitrator because of Argentina's friendship. Possibly now she regrets that she did not accept the cold, calm justice of stranger nations at The Hague, but she can hardly impeach her best friend's procedure by rejecting it. Nor if she did so could she hope for approval in the world's opinion. Her degradation in international opinion would be a dear price to pay for territory which changed hands for a mere $10,000,000. Bolivia owes to herself and to her position in the world the same decent respect to the opinions of mankind which the United States paid when it issued its Declaration of Independence. If our statesmen had argued in the world's forum for the rejection of an award their reasoning could not have won or deserved acceptance, and the United States would have merited a moral boycott. We would see not mere amity and comity prevail between American nations, but a friendly cordiality. Only with regret would we see any nation cold-shouldered by its neighbors, but we owe it to Bolivia to say that she is inviting such moral punishment for herself.

STEALING IN CENTRAL PARK.

The meanest kind of theft seems to be stealing flowers and plants out of a public park for pecuniary profit. One can understand a child picking prohibited flowers to take home to his mother. The downright vandalism of bad boys is, at least, comprehensible. But, though the evidence relating to the wholesale thefts from Central Park of rhododendrons, including those presented by Mrs. SAGE, is not complete or coherent, there can be no doubt, in view of the number of plants taken, that pecuniary profit was the thief's purpose.

It is a crime comparable with stealing ice or medicines from a charity hospital. No theft could be more contemptible. The parks are for everybody, and the flowers and plants are cultivated in Central Park with great difficulty and at great cost to the taxpayers. If the accused patrolman is found guilty, of course no mercy will be shown, even if there is no proof that he profited by the thefts. Thus far, however, only the removal of a few plants has been accounted for, while there are indications that some hundreds have been taken away. McKEAGNEY'S bravado, when confronted with the proofs of his crime, was suggestive. "I did let the man take a few rhododendrons," said he. "I didn't see any harm in it." Reasoning thus, he might let the multitude help themselves to all the blooms and blossoms in the Park, tear up the small trees, and denude the ornamental shrubbery of leaves. McKEAGNEY attempted a foolish defense.

HAMMERSTEIN NOT INCORPORATED

It is pleasant to be assured that Mr. HAMMERSTEIN has not been incorporated. The Hammerstein Opera Company, Inc., is a comparatively unimportant and purely educational corporation. It will not control TETRAZZINI'S marvelous upper register, MARY GARDEN'S lyric histrionism, the splendid fervor of ZENATELLO, the art of DALMORES and RENAUD, nor will it have to do with the promised revivals of OFFENBACH and LECOCQ. HAMMERSTEIN will still be individual, unapproachable, indivisible. The stock company, of which Mr. HAMMERSTEIN will hold most of the stock, after a few weeks of experiment here, will go to other cities on a voyage of discovery. Does musical taste exist? Are the people craving for good opera, dissociated from fashion and fine clothes? By trying them with opera of good quality, well sung, at cheap prices, the new Hammerstein Opera Company, Inc., will solve a problem. Does the proletariat yearn for art?

Meanwhile Mr. HAMMERSTEIN, quite unincorporated, will have leisure to concentrate his mind on the doings of the regular season at the Manhattan Opera House and in Philadelphia, and such doings they promise to be with RICHARD STRAUSS'S "Elektra" one night, and JACQUES OFFENBACH'S "La Grande Duchesse de Gerolstein" the next, with "Monna Vanna," "Sapho," and "Aphrodite" alternated with "Don Giovanni," "Aida," and "The Barber of Seville"! The first, bald news of the incorporation from Albany gave one a shock. HAMMERSTEIN is one of the few individuals left in conduct of great enterprises. Everything, everybody else has been incorporated. But, happily, OSCAR is still himself.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Exaggeration and Misinterpretation.

Of all the distinctively hot-weather stories, few are older or more frequently told than those about heavy showers of rain that bring down with them multitudes of little batrachians, usually described as frogs, but sometimes called toads. A good specimen of these narratives is that which came this week from Gouverneur, N. Y. It was Rana, not Bufo, that fell there, if the local scientists are to be trusted, and he descended in such quantities that walking was made difficult and for half a mile the tracks of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railway were so thickly covered that the progress of trains was impeded.

A feminine reader of THE TIMES wants it to tell her the provenience of these creatures, and incidentally what it thinks as to the possibility that "they were drawn up with the moisture by the sun." So far as we know, this ancient problem has never been solved, nor are we aware that it has ever received serious attention from anybody who could be called a competent naturalist. We incline strongly, therefore, to the opinion that there is no problem, really, and that all tales of the sort originate with people who lack the scientific instinct and prefer complex explanations of phenomena to simple ones.

That little frogs or toads, or both, rather frequently appear in large numbers where none of them had been noticed before, and that this usually happens after heavy showers, seems to be true, but the theory that they come down with the rain rests on no even fairly well-authenticated evidence. The vague talk to the effect that they have been snatched up out of their natal marshes by funnel-shaped clouds has, perhaps, a chance of being true, but the chance is minute, for we never heard or read of anybody who saw the thing done, and there are numberless difficulties in the way. It must be remembered that real rain is usually hail or snow when it starts, which would be trying for those children of Summer, and then one would have to account for the fact that they are never hurt by their supposed fall from the high altitudes.

Our own belief is that neither frogs nor toads ever rain down, but it is likely enough that a good many of them undergo their final metamorphosis at the same time and are lured from their accustomed haunts when a big shower widely extends the conditions that please them. Ordinary evaporation from the surface of marshes, of course, would never elevate even the smallest of tadpoles the least fraction of an inch.

Street Cleaning After a Better Plan

Real success with the plan of cleaning the streets by the use of water under pressure will depend upon a much more rigid enforcement of the ordinances against using the streets as dumping ground for rubbish than ever has been here attempted. If all the pavements were good, and nothing had to be removed from them except the legitimate products of use and wear, powerful streams of water would undoubtedly be the ideal means of doing the work, for all the material could safely be intrusted to the sewers. But while the streets are the favorite—in some parts of the city the only—depository for anything that anybody doesn't want, the new water wagons will be able to do little more than to complete and improve the work of brush and shovel.

Even so, the money they cost would probably be well expended, but it is doubtful if the results would be sufficiently appreciated to justify the expense in the eyes of the taxpayers. The plan of forcing water into a big tank against air pressure and then having the latter drive it out again when and where needed is, of course, scientifically correct. In another application it is fast replacing the gravity systems, with their huge and ugly tubs high in the air, hitherto the most prominent feature of the landscape wherever private water supplies are required in either country or town, and it is a mark of intelligent progress that instead of merely sprinkling our streets we should make the water wagon serve another purpose, and do more than lay the dust.

The best way to keep streets clean, however, is not to let them get dirty. Economy as well as sanitation and aesthetics lie in that direction, and now that the future promises to free cities of their most undesirable resident, the horse, we should at least begin to think of our streets in terms of prevention rather than of cure. That is the admirable tendency of the age in all its activities, and this should be one of its immediate manifestations. At present we scatter and collect our rubbish again and again before we waste it by throwing it into the sea. Often even that is not the end of the process, for the stuff returns to the beaches. The fact is that humanity has not yet learned how to make life in large communities either safe or cleanly, but it is "inching along," and will arrive in time—if the world lasts long enough.

And by the way, the new water wagons are new only in New York. Once more do we try as an experiment what other people tested and found not wanting long ago. To do this seems to be a metropolitan characteristic.

Here Is Real "Aviation."

More than a mile a minute for more than nine consecutive hours was the record made by the fastest of the homing pigeons that flew on Monday from North Bay, Ont., to Baltimore. The air line distance is 510 miles and the time was nine hours seventeen minutes, but doubtless the birds flew considerably further than a straight course would have been, and presumably they stopped at least once or twice for food and water.

If only the aeroplane could have such a motor as these pigeons possess! All the problems of aerial navigation would be quickly solved, and the WRIGHTS and their rivals wouldn't have to wait for the rare hours of fainting zephyrs before making their timid and uncertain flights.

It is a pity that birds have no sense of humor; if they did these would be days of hilarious enjoyment for the feathered tribes.

Medal for Mr. Sammis.

I should like to contribute to a fund for the presentation of a medal or other suitable token of regard and gratitude to Mr. A. V. Sammis of Huntington for horsewhipping the insolent chauffeur. If you will start such a fund, X.

LATIN-AMERICANS ORGANIZE.

Chamber of Commerce Incorporated Here to Foster Trade.

The incorporation of the Latin-American Chamber of Commerce was approved by Supreme Court Justice Erlanger yesterday. The objects of the new organization are to foster trade and commerce, to reform abuses relative hitherto, and to obtain freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions. It proposes to obtain reliable information as to the standing of merchants and other matters, and to endeavor to obtain a uniformity in the customs and usages of trade and commerce, and will seek to promote a more enlarged and friendly intercourse between the business men of Spain, Portugal, and the Spanish-American and Portuguese-American States and those of the United States.

The Directors for the first meeting are George C. Vedder, Edward T. Tiery, Clarence L. Thurston, Hugh M. Kohler, and Alexander Del Mar.

MAY SEE LIGHTING CO.'S BOOKS

Appellate Division Now Says the City Has a Right to Do So.

The Appellate Division decided yesterday that the city may inspect the books and papers of the United Electric Light and Power Company and the New York Edison Company in an effort to ascertain the cost of electricity for lighting purposes charged against the city by the two concerns for the year 1908. This ruling reverses that of the lower court.

The city refused to pay the bill for electric lighting on the ground that the charge was not a reasonable one, and asked to be allowed to inspect the books of the two concerns in an effort to find out whether its contention is correct. The companies refused this permission, and were upheld in the Supreme Court, but the Appellate Division holds it to be a reasonable request and orders accordingly.

THEORY OF LIGHT AND HEAT.

Sun and All Planetary Bodies Act Like Huge Dynamos.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The dynamic activity of the sun was well shown in the magnificent picture in the Sunday edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES. M. Maurice Slavutsky refers in his letter from Odessa, June 27, to "the etheric line of pressure" between a planet and the earth. It is reasonable to infer that Prof. Hale accepts my theory, that the sun is not the centre of a sphere radiating light and heat in every direction, generating this force by contraction, as Lord Kelvin maintained, or stoked with aerolites, as Sir Norman Lockyer gravely asserted.

My theory has, at least, the merit of simplicity, so that it can be accepted or rejected by any one conversant with the commonplaces of astronomical and magnetic laws. The sun and all planetary bodies exert no mechanical force, such as radiation, beyond an extremely limited distance. They are rotating magneto dynamos, and evoke corresponding action without regard to distance, as the bell rings, or the diaphragm vibrates, in the telephone, whatever may be the terrestrial space between the transmitter and receiver. Each planet sets up a disturbance in the atmosphere of the earth dependent upon its mass and rate of rotation. Hence the practically uniform temperature of the moon, whether in the full blaze of the sun or during its long night, as compared with the brilliancy of Jupiter, with its extremely rapid diurnal rotation. There is no need of an external impulse other than that required to maintain rotation, because each planet returns as much as it receives. The fact that during the total eclipse of 1882 a comet was seen within a million miles of the sun conclusively shows that there were no solar rays passing into the ethereal void between it and the earth. The earth and the sun had the relation of a searchlight. When the moon intervened the comet became visible. I have written to the Secretary of the Royal Society, (London,) requesting him to inform me whether there was any publication of this theory prior to my communication. It is to be hoped, in the interests of science, that this was the case, although I doubt it. The sooner the nebular hypothesis and the (popular) theory of gravitation are dropped from the textbooks the better for intelligent progress.

COPE WHITEHOUSE.

New York, July 12, 1909.

PUBLIC BATHS.

Declares It Is Necessary to Tip Attendants to Get Attention.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is maintained at Pelham Bay Park a municipal bathing pavilion for the free use of the people of New York. It is intended to be without cost to bathers, and is largely frequented by the middle and poorer class. To get a house one must request the park employe in charge, and no fee of any kind is to be required or even permitted.

The outrageous form which petty graft here assumes is indeed aggravating. It is practically necessary to "tip" the attendant for performing a service for which he is paid. One must "see" him, or it will be with great difficulty that one obtains a room.

It is certainly irritating, to say the least, to watch these brazen, shameless park employes (at the men's pavilion) taking advantage of the poorer classes, who make good use of these houses. It is an easy matter for them to harass, (as they do in various ways,) all who are not sufficiently liberal. I have seen one with the audacity to listen to a request for a room repeated three times without making a reply, or even giving the slightest attention to the speaker. It is about time that "tipping" were absolutely prohibited under pain of dismissal, and that the people be given their right without molestation.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

New York, July 12, 1909.

The Girl in Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You will surely permit an old reader to advise the precocious "American girl of 17" to learn from those who know the real meaning of that wholesome and wise institution, the "chaperon," in very civilized Europe, before she presumes to misconstrue its real purpose in an immoral sense.

In Europe a girl of 17, under a well-chosen chaperon, busies herself with her home duties and her studies. She aims at higher, purer ideals, and does not attribute low moral motives to institutions she knows nothing about.

The confidence and comradeship of mother and daughter, father and brother, are more sacred in "uncivilized" Europe than right here in New York. If American men are so superior to foreigners, dear little girl, why so many divorces?

City Dark in Early Morning.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why are the street lights put out before daylight? This morning, in the vicinity of Madison Square, the street lights were out at 3:30 o'clock. Fully a half hour afterward the shadows from the moon were visible, the official time of sunrise coming after 4:30 o'clock. Out of the darkness came automobiles with no lights, making it dangerous for pedestrians. Policemen did not seem to be around.

DREAMS AND THE MAN.

Shimmering in fair green,
Gayly calling: "Come, be free!
Plunge in waters crystalline,"
That's sea.

Smiling, flower-carpeted,
Whispering its pretty plea:
"Hither!—hither!—o'er me tread."
That's lea.

Humming, humming ev'rywhere
Through the realm he holds in fee:
"Sip with me this fragrance rare."
That's bee.

Softly murmuring above:
"Phyllis—Strephon—can't you see
I'm the trysting place for love?"
That's tree.

Broiling in an office hot
(Mercury at ninety-three)—
Muttering what I should not.
That's me!

ANIMALS UNPACKED AT ZOO.

Curator Ditmars Introduces 448 Animals to Bronx Collection.

Unpacking after a European trip is always an interesting task, and early yesterday morning Curator Ditmars of the Bronx Zoo started to unpack the forty-eight cages of 448 animals he brought back from the Old World. He found that he had had good luck on the voyage, for only two of the animals had died, and his good luck continued through the unpacking, for only two of the animals got loose.

One of these was the cayman, a South American alligator, about four feet long, which slipped out of the hands of two attendants and gave chase after Charles Snyder, the chief snake man in the reptile house. Snyder ran down the hall of the house, beating the cayman to the door by a head. He slammed the door behind him. The several attendants left behind attacked the cayman at once and locked him up.

The other stranger that got loose was a monitor, which is the largest lizard known. It is five feet long and looks something like a crocodile, but has a long forked tongue, which it pokes out like an independent schoolgirl.

This monitor seems to cherish a grudge against Curator Ditmars. It attacked him when he was superintending the loading of the animals on the ship in Europe. The minute it was taken out of its crate yesterday it started after him again.

Keeper Snyder and several other attendants captured him yesterday by throwing a sack over his head and tieing a rope around his body in front of his hind legs. He was then dragged to the new cage prepared for him.

The casualty list of the trip consisted of a regal python, a small and valuable snake, other specimens of which, however, the Zoo already has, and a small lizard of no particular note.

All of the 448 animals showed the effects of the ocean voyage. While the human pasengers were allowed three and four meals a day when they could take them, the snakes were offered refreshment only twice, and then all they got was pure water.

TENEMENT ON CHURCH SITE.

Old Home of Williamsburg's Marrying Parson Being Torn Down.

The old brick church at South Third Street and Bedford Avenue, Williamsburg, of which the Rev. J. J. White was the pastor, is being torn down and on its site is to be erected a six-story tenement building.

The church was built more than sixty years ago and was first occupied by a Universalist society, of which the late Bernard Peters, afterward editor and publisher of The Brooklyn Times, was pastor. The society went elsewhere, and the Rev. Dr. White was put in charge of the church. In the twenty-five years of his pastorate Mr. White got the reputation of having married more runaway couples than any other minister in the country. He was frequently in trouble with the parents of the young people he married. He would accommodate any eloping couple at any hour of the night, and frequently, instead of receiving a fee, he would furnish the couple with carfare to get back home.

After his death some twelve years ago the church society became known as the Pentecostal Tabernacle. This society disbanded a few years ago and the property was put upon the market.

FOR A SMETANA MEMORIAL.

Association Incorporated Here to Build a Monument to Him.

Application was made to the Supreme Court yesterday for the incorporation of the Bedrich Smetana Bust Association, the object being "to obtain by subscription a fund for the purpose of erecting in New York a bust, or monument, for Bedrich Smetana, the founder of modern Bohemian music, and present the same on behalf of Bohemian-American citizens to the municipality." Smetana is the composer of "The Bartered Bride," produced at the Metropolitan Opera House some time ago.

The incorporators are Thomas Copek of 2,942 Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx; Vincent W. Woytiset of 350 East Seventy-second Street, J. E. S. Vogan of 435 East Eighty-sixth Street, Charles Hrbek of 405 East Sixty-ninth Street, Emil Polak of 1,321 First Avenue, M. Voytisek of 1,363 Avenue A, M. Levy of 221 East Seventy-fourth Street, V. Trejbal of 447 East Eighty-third Street, Annie Wirth of 345 East Seventy-third Street, and Anton Zatepalet of 1,502 First Avenue.

CHANGES AT COLUMBIA.

Prof. Weeks Succeeds Prof. Page—Karl Runge Kaiser Wilhelm Professor.

A change in the Faculty of Columbia University and appointments of foreign professors as lecturers were announced yesterday by President Nicholas Murray Butler on his return from a three weeks' trip in the West.

Prof. Karl Runge of the department of mathematics in the University of Goettingen, Germany, has been appointed Kaiser Wilhelm Professor for the next year. Other lecturers from foreign universities will be Emile Boutroux of the Paris Sorbonne, Prof. Jespersen of the University of Copenhagen, A. L. Smith of Balliol College, Oxford, and J. S. Reid of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Prof. Raymond Weeks, formerly of the University of Illinois, will take the place of Prof. Page, who resigned from the Department of Romance Languages, to go to Northwestern University.

President Butler will represent the university in the Fall at the installation of President Lowell at Harvard, and President Nichols at Dartmouth.

GRISCOM WANTS TO RETIRE.

Ex-Ambassador to Italy Declares He Is Done with Diplomacy.

Lloyd Griscom, ex-Ambassador to Italy, returned from Europe yesterday by the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. He was accompanied by his wife and son, Bronson Winthrop Griscom. Speaking of the work at Messina, Mr. Griscom said that the rebuilding was being carried out and progressing very satisfactorily in the earthquake districts.

"I have finished my diplomatic career," said the former Ambassador, "and have no fixed plans at the present. I am going to Bar Harbor with my family for the Summer and shall take a short trip to Canada to join my father in salmon fishing."

Mr. Griscom looked exceedingly well and was most emphatic in his statement that he would not accept another diplomatic appointment.

New Half Moon on Its Way Here.

Jonkeer R. De Marees Van Swinderin, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, and former Minister from that country to the United States and Mexico, arrived yesterday on the Holland-America liner Potsdam to join his wife, who is in Washington. He brought photographs of the Dutch ship Half Moon with him for the Hudson-Fulton Memorial Association. He said that the vessel was on its way in sections on board the Soote Dyke, and would arrive here in two weeks.

Erie Tests the Hudson Tube.

An experimental train was run in the Hudson Tunnel yesterday morning from the Erie station in Jersey City to the New York terminal, at 30 Church Street, in five and a half minutes. As six minutes will be the regular schedule, the Erie officials believe that commuters using the new tube will save about fifteen minutes from Jersey City to Church and Fulton Streets when the trains are running regularly, beginning Aug. 2.

PLAN FOR EMPLOYERS IN OLD MEN'S AID

They May Advertise Free Next Sunday If They Are in Need of Help.

IDEA FROM A MAN OVER 50

He Would Have Some Fraternal Society Found a Bureau of Employment.

THE TIMES will print, free of charge, advertisements next Sunday from all firms and business houses willing and in position to give immediate, bonafide employment to men and women 50 and over out of work and in need of it.

Those who have been following the efforts of THE TIMES for men and women debarred from earning a livelihood because of their gray hairs have learned that here and there are jobs which those having the disposal of them would be anxious to give to an elderly man or woman but that the difficulty has been to bring the job and the right person together.

For three Sundays the men and women needing work have been setting forth their qualifications through the free advertisements in THE TIMES, with excellent results, as the many offers of work received have shown, so now the problem is to be attacked from the other side, with the view that the firm with the job to offer may announce it.

The only restrictions put on such offers of work for the man and woman over 50 is that the advertisement shall not be more than fifty words long, and shall be in either the main office, Times Building, Times Square; the Downtown Office, 8 Spruce Street, or the Wall Street office, 80 Broadway, by Friday at noon.

In spite of the fact that on three Sundays advertisements for the gray-haired have been published, thus well canvassing the field, nearly seventy replies had been received up to last night to the advertisements published last Sunday. Among yesterday's evidences of results was this letter from the Superintendent of an organization which aids men and women, handicapped by age or otherwise, to get work:

> We are sure you will be interested to know that as a result of the "ad" which you so kindly published in your paper, —— ——, 62 years of age, an American, has obtained work at the —— Hotel in West 112th Street. We were very glad to be able to get work for him through your paper. We have been trying for several days to get something for him, but on account of his deafness were not able to place him.

Among yesterday's letters was one from a Brooklyn man who suggests that some fraternal organization open a department to aid those handicapped by age in getting work. He says:

> Kindly accept my thanks for your generous treatment of the men of 50. I am one of the unfortunates that availed themselves of your offer by advertising twice in your columns.
>
> I think there is too much prejudice against this class, and if employers would remove it and take a man for what he is worth, regardless of age, they would find many who are still capable, energetic, and all possessed of experience.
>
> I am a business man of wide experience and could fill other places besides those in my "ads," such as a buyer of groceries. I have also had some experience in real estate and would gladly accept a place on a commission basis with an honorable downtown firm or as assistant or manager of customers for a Stock Exchange house. I have been familiar with the stock market for years.
>
> Regarding the work that you have set out to accomplish I think much good would result from the establishment of an employment bureau of a National character, under the auspices of some one of the fraternal societies, conducted on a business, not a charitable, basis, a small registration fee could be charged to make it self-sustaining. Surely if a firm or corporation can make a business of it by taking a fee from every applicant that registers and find places for only 10 or 15 per cent. of them, there certainly ought to be room for one promoted by a fraternity and aided by a powerful press.
>
> From appearances I think we are on the eve of a general business improvement that may lead to an old-fashioned boom in all business, and now would be a good time to wipe out this prejudice against age and give all an equal opportunity.

"Real Buckeye," who has traveled all over the world, writes:

> You were good enough to publish, under the heading of "Travel," my communication in your good paper of July 4, signed "Real Buckeye," Box A-143.
>
> No reply was vouchsafed, but it would seem that, among the thousands who are touring the world, many of them for the first time, some family, group of friends, or individual might like to employ the services of a traveled gentleman of experience, refinement, and culture, who for thirty-five years has visited all part of the globe as representative of American commercial enterprises.
>
> To a voyager knowing little, if any, of the lands abroad my knowledge of people, languages, and conditions would prove invaluable, as well as a saving of time and money. Perhaps no American of my age, 58, has so thorough an acquaintance with the less traveled countries like Russia, China, Japan, India, South America, Australasia, and Africa, to say nothing of modern Europe, as the writer.
>
> If I may be permitted to hope that these facts can be mentioned in your columns devoted to the old men and women, I feel certain that some one will wish to utilize my services, and that I will prove useful I have no fear—I am strong, healthy, and of correct habits.

Advertisements left out last Sunday will be printed next Sunday.

BOND COMPANIES NOT FAVORED

Stevens Denies Trying to Influence Barge Canal Contractors' Security.

ALBANY, July 13.—In opening bids today for five barge canal contracts, involving an expenditure of over $5,000,000, Supt. F. C. Stevens of the State Department of Public Works stated the position of the department with regard to bonding companies. There has been considerable rivalry among the companies for barge canal patronage.

"It has been intimated," Mr. Stevens said in the presence of a hundred or more contractors, "that this department is interested in some bonding company or that one bonding company or one agent has a preference in this office.

"It has been stated that contractors have been told that it would be to their advantage to deal with that one agent. The statement is absolutely false, and any such representation is misrepresentation. No one has preference here, and the bond of any company with proper financial standing will be accepted.

"I want to say further that if any contractor so desires he may deposit collateral security in place of a bond."

FOLSOM ESTATE INCREASED.

George W. Folsom Has Brought Sister's Property to $1,579,419.

The report of Rollin M. Morgan, the referee appointed by the Supreme Court to pass upon the accounts of George W. Folsom, as committee of the estate of Margaret W. Folsom, an incompetent, shows that its value in 1869 was $305,000, and at the present time is $1,579,419. Justice Erlanger approved the finding of the referee, confirmed his recommendation that Mr. Folson should be paid $20,000 for his management of the estate in 1908, and that $1,000 be paid Mr. Morgan as referee.

Miss Folsom was declared an incompetent in 1869, and in the forty years' interval the estate has been managed by her brother, Mr. Folsom, who is the only next of kin and heir-at-law of his sister. She is in the McLean Hospital at Waverly, N. Y.

MANAGERS AT WAR OVER NEW OPERETTA

Savage and Shuberts Both Claim American Rights to "The Gay Hussars."

"THE DEVIL" OVER AGAIN

Mr. Savage Will Produce the Play To-morrow in Atlantic City—Shuberts Will Stage It Here in the Fall.

Henry W. Savage announced last night that he would produce to-morrow night at the Apollo Theatre, in Atlantic City, for the first time in America a new operetta entitled "The Gay Hussars," which is now being produced with success in Berlin, Munich, and Vienna, under the title of "Ein Herbstmanoever" ("An Autumn Manoeuver.")

Mr. Savage's announcement is due to the fact that THE TIMES announced last Friday that the Shuberts had secured the American rights to the same play, which, they said, was to be produced in New York under the name of "The Dancing Hussars." Mr. Savage said last night that he had understood that he had secured the entire American rights to the play, and when he saw the Shubert announcement it had much the same effect as when, just a year ago, Harrison Grey Fiske announced that he was going to produce "The Devil," the play which Mr. Savage had planned to produce himself a few weeks later.

Mr. Fiske stole a march upon Mr. Savage at that time, and it was only after hurried and herculean work that the latter manager was able to put his production on in New York in time to forestall Mr. Fiske from having the whole field for "The Devil" to himself. The controversy growing out of that play lasted several months, and was bitter. It ended in Mr. Fiske being expelled from the Theatrical Producing Managers' Association on charges of unprofessional conduct preferred by Mr. Savage. The fight between Mr. Savage and the Shuberts over "The Gay Hussar," bids fair to become as historic as that one.

The Shubert announcement resulted in forcing Mr. Savage to show his hand in the production of "The Gay Hussars" much sooner than he had intended. For five weeks Mr. Savage has had the opera quietly under rehearsal, the chorus at the Tremont Theatre, in Boston, and the principals at the Garden Theatre, here, under George Marion.

It was Mr. Savage's intention to produce the opera on a large scale and try to make it a second "Merry Widow" production. Mr. Marion went to Vienna in April to get the original stage detail, and the heavy scenic production was finished before Mr. Savage returned from abroad six weeks ago. The women's costumes have been imported from Paris and the "Hussars" are from Vienna.

Immediately upon reading the notice of the Shubert production in THE TIMES Mr. Savage notified Lee Shubert of the situation, calling his attention to his contracts and what he said was his exclusive arrangement with the authors. Mr. Savage in an announcement sent out last night said that he had "presented his case so strongly that he feels satisfied that his prior rights will be respected and that there will not be any occasion for a legal controversy."

The Shuberts, however, are going ahead with their own production.

Mr. Savage would not discuss his immediate plans regarding the opera beyond saying that it will be produced to-morrow night in Atlantic City and then go to another city before coming to New York. It was said on good authority last night, however, that it will be produced at the Knickerbocker Theatre here next Monday night.

The company will consist of over 100 people, with an orchestra of thirty-five musicians, and a Hungarian band, which will be used in a big ballroom scene. The entire company will go to Atlantic City on a special train this morning. The authors of the piece, which is a military operetta, are Emerich Kalman, who wrote the score, and Karl von Bakonyi and Robert Bodansky, who are responsible for the book. The English adaptation is by Maurice Brown Kirby and the lyrics by Grant Stewart.

For his production Mr. Savage has secured Orrin Johnson for the leading Hussar rôle and "Bobby" North for the comedy part. Anna Bussert was lifted from "The Merry Widow" company in Seattle to take the prima donna part, and Muriel Terry, the operatic soubrette, was imported from Berlin especially to play the part of a boy. Others in the cast are Florence Reid, Ilon Bergere, George C. Trimble, Alonzo Price, Robert Young, W. H. Denny, and Fred Montgomery.

"We have had the American rights of this play for several months," Lee Shubert said last night, "and all I care to say at present is that we will produce the play in New York at one of our Broadway theatres on Sept. 4 under the name of 'The Fall Manoeuvres.' Our version of the piece is being completed now by Glen McDonough, who has been at work on it three or four weeks."

ACTRESS ENGINEER ARRESTED

Miss Bulger Ran Her Auto Too Fast in Central Park.

A young woman, who said she was Irene Bulger, a vaudeville actress and an engineer, was arrested last night while operating a small automobile in Central Park West, between Eighty-eighth and Eighty-ninth Streets, charged with exceeding the speed limit.

Miss Bulger, who gave her address as the Hotel Bayard, 142 West Forty-ninth Street, did not have half so much trouble over her arrest as she did when she finally attempted to start her car in front of the station, and fully three-quarters of an hour elapsed before she managed to get away, with a score of men pushing the machine.

Bicycle Policeman Eynon of the West 100th Street Station arrested Miss Bulger. He said she was traveling at the rate of twenty miles an hour. At the police station Miss Bulger said she was one of the three women given an engineer's certificate by the State of Pennsylvania. She thought it highly improbable that she was exceeding the speed limit. James Farley, who is connected with the Hotel Bayard, bailed Miss Bulger. When she tried to start her auto again it balked, and it was not until the crowd had pushed it for several blocks that it suddenly began to snort and made off in the night.

SPRAGUE MANSION SOLD.

Narragansett Home of ex-Governor Bought by Consul and Mrs. Borda.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 13.—Canonchet, the historic mansion of Narragansett Pier, has been sold by ex-Gov. Sprague and Mrs. Sprague to Wenceslas Borda, United States Consul at Porto Rico. The purchase price is not mentioned. For years Canonchet has been the home of the Spragues. Mrs. Sprague is a sister of Mrs. Borda, wife of the present owner.

Canonchet to-day comprises about 350 acres, and all of this is disposed of, with the exception of shore lots along the ocean front.

Consul Borda and Mrs. Borda are now en route from Porto Rico, bound for Narragansett, and will spend the Summer here. They were married within the past year.

RUSH FOR OPERA CHORUS.

Hammerstein Chooses 83 from 968 Philadelphia Applicants.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Oscar Hammerstein tried the applicants for his grand opera chorus for next season today. He came on an early train, bringing his New York chorus master, Josiah Zure.

They were met at the Grand Opera House by 968 applicants, 402 men and 566 women, who had an opportunity to exhibit the quality of their voices. Of this number 58 women and 25 men will have a rehearing in about two weeks. The rest did not have the necessary qualifications.

Mr. Hammerstein said that the Philadelphians have superior talent to the quality exhibited in New York. He asserted that a marked difference existed not so much in the quality of voice as in the quality of the personality. The Philadelphians are far more sincere, depending largely upon their musical talents for their bread and butter, which always makes for an enhancement of individuality.

In New York the women applicants especially are more or less of the "airy, fairy Lillian" sort, to quote Mr. Hammerstein, who do not take themselves or anything else seriously.

NEW PLAYS FOR THOMPSON.

His Most Noteworthy Production to be One Called "Springtime."

Frederic Thompson announced last night his plans for the coming theatrical season. "Springtime," a new play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, will be produced about Oct. 15, with Mabel Taliaferro in the leading rôle. This will be Mr. Thompson's most pretentious production.

A new play by Eugene Walter, called "The Assassin," will be produced early in the Winter. J. Hartley Manners has completed a new play for Mr. Thompson called "The Fool's Comedy," which will have an early production.

Two other new plays by Porter Emerson Browne, "The Lure" and "Waste," will be seen on Broadway before the holidays. Two "Polly of the Circus" companies, one headed by Edith Taliaferro, will be sent on tour. There will also be road companies of "Brewster's Millions," "A Fool There Was," and "Via Wireless."

MARIE TEMPEST COMING.

Will Tour the United States Next Winter in "Penelope."

LONDON, July 13.—Marie Tempest will appear in America next Winter under the management of Charles Frohman in "Penelope," a play that has been a great success in London for the last eight months.

She will sail for New York with Mr. Frohman's London company in December, and is to make a five months' tour of the United States.

Actor "Al" Leach Stricken on Stage.

Last night at Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Al Leach, one of the performers, collapsed as he was leaving the stage. He was removed to his rooms at the Hotel Gerard, where he was said to be in a serious condition. Nervous trouble was given as the cause of his breakdown.

KEEN'S CLOCK HEARD FROM.

It Vanished in a Firecracker Explosion, but It Will Come Back.

Manager Paul Henkel of Keene's Chop House reported last night that he had heard from Louis XIV.'s clock, previously reported as taken from the mantel above the fireplace during the celebration of July 5.

"The next day I advertised that I knew the man who had taken the clock," said Mr. Henkel, "and that I would disclose his name unless the clock was returned. You see, this was a clock that had belonged to Louis XIV. I took it for an account. It might be worth $3,000, though it isn't a big one.

"Well, this man—he had often asked what I'd take for the clock, and I had always told him it was priceless. He was near it on the night of July 5, when some one set off a firecracker. In the confusion the clock disappeared. I knew this man had taken it.

"To-night I got a letter signed 'Not a Kleptomaniac.' It said the writer had only been fooling, and that he was going to send back the old clock. He had left it on a Seventh Avenue car, No. 831, he said, and I could get it at the lost and found office of the company. I'm now going to get it."

Mr. Henkel is regarded as a man of much versatility as well as up in clock lore.

MOURRAILLE—PENNIMAN.

The wedding of Charles Gustave Mourraille of New York and Miss Sarah Dulony Penniman of Mount Washington, daughter of the late Edward J. Penniman, took place on July 10, 1909, at St. James's Church, Mount Washington. The Rev. Wilber F. Watkins, the rector, officiated. The bride was given away in marriage by her brother, Edward O. Penniman. John Edmunds Mourraille, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Mr. Mourraille is a son of the late Dr. Gustave Mourraille of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Mourraille are taking an automobile trip through New England. They will live in New York.

ALLEN—BRONIS.

Hampton Allen and Miss Julia Bronis, daughter of Mrs. Edith M. Bronis, were married on Monday at the home of the bride's mother. The Rev. George P. Eastman, pastor of the Highland Avenue Congregational Church, officiated. James Bronis and Miss Katharine Allen were the only attendants. Miss Bronis, who is a graduate of the Orange Training School for Nurses, was the first visiting nurse in Orange to tuberculosis patients, the first Superintendent of the New Jersey Orthopaedic Hospital and Dispensary, and in the last three years had inaugurated and built up the school nursing system in the Orange Public Schools. KLAW & ERLANGER JOIN WITH FROHMAN

They Will Use Jointly the Blackstone Theatre Soon to be Built in Chicago.

MAKE IT PRODUCING CENTRE

Both Firms Wanted a Western House and Agreed to Lease Together the First That Offered.

The New Blackstone Theatre, soon to be erected on Hubbard Place in Chicago, for which there have been many bidders during the last six months, has been secured on a long-term lease by Klaw & Erlanger. Charles Frohman, who announced some time ago that he intended to erect a theatre in Chicago and make it a producing centre, has joined forces with Klaw & Erlanger, and the two firms will use the Blackstone jointly.

The theatre is to have a large seating capacity, and is to be equipped with every modern theatrical device. The stage is to be patterned on that of the New Amsterdam Theatre in this city, which is generally considered by theatrical experts to be the most perfect and practical in the world.

Early last Fall Mr. Erlanger visited Chicago and negotiated for a hotel and theatre site. Announcement was made at that time that Klaw & Erlanger intended to have their own producing theatre in Chicago. About four weeks ago Charles Frohman also went to Chicago, and he, too, announced that he intended to have a theatre in the Western city of a similar nature.

The heads of the two firms promptly decided to pool their issues, and agreed that whichever of them first secured a site would give the other an opportunity to be a co-lessee. When the theatre opens it will be devoted exclusively to the attractions of these two producers, and it will be the first time that their names have appeared together as managers of one theatre.

The negotiations were conducted by Levy Mayer, general counsel for Klaw & Erlanger. Work on the new theatre will be commenced immediately.

BARNSTORMERS BACK ANGRY.

Got No Pay to Speak of and Many Fell Ill in South America.

After surviving yellow fever, bubonic plague, and hard times generally, twenty men and women, members of an American theatrical company which went stranded in Caracas, Venezuela, arrived yesterday from Barbados on the banana steamship Surinam. Among them were twelve women and six children who had suffered considerably from illness during their stay in Central America.

Alfred A. C. Jundt, Prof. Alfreno Swartz, father of five of the six children, and Joseph La Centra, trapeze artists, and, members of the "White Rats," found fault with Harry L. Allen, who booked the tour.

Miss Muriel Darling, one of the actresses, said that all they had received was two weeks' pay and transportation one way to La Guayra. When the bubonic plague broke out in Caracas the whole company had to walk down to La Guayra, and then they couldn't get a ship to bring them home, as they had no money.

With the help of the American Consul the company got as far as Trinidad, and got up a performance, but it rained the whole time, Miss Darling said, and the people wouldn't come to the theatre.

Alfred Jundt said that there was daily duelling in Caracas. Men went out and shot at each other in the public parks between drinks, he said.

Other members of the party were Harry Nelson and his brother, John; Herrera, Danile Kumro, Louis Seeker, Ray Huling, and Preston Florence.

BABY'S LIFE SAVED BY FRIEND'S BLOOD

Boy Volunteers to Submit to Transfusion When the Child Is Dying.

SURGEONS ARE INTERESTED

Consciousness Soon Returns After the Operation and the Little Patient Will Recover.

When everything else had failed, Dr. Charles Goodman, attending surgeon at the Beth Israel Hospital, turned yesterday to the delicate operation of the transfusion of blood and saved the life of a child given up for dead.

The case was that of Julius Schwartz, 2½ years old, of 85 Chrystie Street. He fell from a fire escape at his home last Saturday, sustaining severe cuts and bruises about the face and body.

When ordinary means had been vainly resorted to to stop the flow of blood, the child was taken to the hospital. There the surgeons saw that the peculiar and rare condition known to surgeons as hemophilia, or uncontrollable bleeding, had developed. They used every means known to their science to stop it, but apparently without checking it in the least. The boy was soon apparently lifeless, and the surgeons saw that nothing but the immediate transfusion of healthy blood into his veins would save him.

The next problem confronting the surgeons was to get the healthy blood, as the father of the child, anxious to make the sacrifice if necessary, was anaemic, and had no blood to spare. Then Meyer Berkofsky, husky, warm-hearted youth of 19, who is a boarder in the Schwartz home, came forward, saying the doctors could take all of his blood they needed. Accepting the offer, Dr. Goodman at once had young Berkofsky admitted to the hospital as a patient, and began to make preparations for the operation.

This consisted of the opening of the radial artery in the youth's forearm, which was united to the veins in the child's arm. The blood was permitted to flow from the youth's arm to that of the baby for fully half an hour.

When put on the operating table the child was to all appearances dead. No pulse was perceptible, and apparently there was scarcely a chance to save his life. Soon after the rich red blood of the youth began to transfuse, however, the child showed signs of life. The lips and ears became pink, and presently, as the doctors looked on, consciousness returned and the patient was able to partake freely of nourishment.

Dr. Goodman said last night that the baby now had a good chance of a complete recovery. He was assisted in the operation by Dr. M. J. Lippman, house surgeon of Beth Israel Hospital, and other members of the surgical staff. Several of the leading surgeons of the city visited the hospital to witness the operation.

In the Financial Advertising Field
There are thirty-eight National Banks in New York City. At the last call of the Comptroller The New York Times printed the statements of EVERY NATIONAL BANK in New York City but one, thirty-three of the forty-three State Banks, and twenty-six of the thirty-seven Trust Company statements—a far greater number than any other newspaper.
The New York Times not only leads in bank statements; it prints much more financial advertising generally than any other newspaper in the United States. The total number of lines of financial announcements printed in The Times in the first six months of this year was 393,952, as compared with 356,085 lines for the corresponding period of last year, over 47,000 lines more than the next New York newspaper making a feature of financial news.
THE NEW YORK TIMES is recognized by bankers and financiers generally as the foremost, most largely circulated, and most efficient financial advertising medium. THE TIMES is kept on file in banking institutions throughout the country, and the financial houses use its advertising columns more extensively than any other newspaper in New York, or, indeed, in the world.

Louis Loeb, a well-known artist who had a studio at 57 West Fifty-eighth Street, died on Monday in Canterbury, N. Returning to the United States, he executed many important commissions. He received medals at the St. Louis World's Fair and at the Pan-American Fair at Buffalo.

In 1902 he won the Hallgarten Prize of the National Academy of Design, and the next year the Society of American Arts awarded him the Webb Prize. He was elected an associate of the Academy of Design in 1901 and five years later was raised to the rank of an Academician.

Last year there were thirty-four of the artist's canvases in the Macbeth Gallery, including a portrait of Israel Zangwill and another of Eleanor Robson. Others were "The Summit," "The Temple of the Winds," and "Morning."

DROUGHT PARCHES CROPS NEAR THE CITY

Territory 200 Miles in Diameter About New York Suffering for Rain.

COST OF PRODUCE GOES UP

Weather Bureau Finds No Signs of Immediate Relief—Great Damage from Forest Fires.

Encompassing this city is a well-defined ring, some 200 miles in diameter, within which it is as dry as brick dust, with vegetables, fruits, and flowers parching to a crisp. Outside of that circle rain has fallen plentifully, the grass is green and every valley suggests the Land of Goshen.

Reports from the United States Weather Bureau, from the produce merchants, and others whose business and interest it is to keep in touch with the country sections neighboring this city, show that throughout an extensive territory, with New York as the centre, farm conditions are distressing, with waters in wells and rivers drying out, and the roads almost impassable for the dust.

An unusual feature of this is that the section affected is so clearly defined. For weeks there has been no rain of consequence in Eastern New York State, Southern Connecticut, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania, while conditions in North Connecticut, Western New York, and Western Pennsylvania are normal. Rain in plenty fell in Western Pennsylvania, and a part of Western New York not later than Monday night and early yesterday morning, but according to the Weather Bureau the rain-clouds stopped at the "dry line" as if it had been an impassable wall of stone. At one time the forecasters here were confident that this disturbance would bring rain to parching New York City and vicinity, but the drops which fell early yesterday afternoon could almost have been counted, and last evening just before he left the office, Superintendent Emery of the Weather Bureau said there wasn't a hopeful cloud in sight, and before New York got any rain there would have to be a marked change in the weather conditions.

Mr. Emery said there hadn't been so much as a shower of consequence this month, the last rain to fall in the dry section being in June. As every one knows, the country parches quickly under a July sun, particularly when June left the earth thirsty. The rainfall of June was considerable, but less than normal, and so the effect of the July drought was not long in showing itself upon everything green that grows and lives by water. Mr. Emery had no reports regarding the condition of the crops in the section in the clutches of the drought, as the department's activities are now confined strictly to the meteorological conditions, but the manager of Produce News, of 6 Harrison Street, which publishes the prices current for farm produce, said that his reports from all the section affected by the drought were distressing, showing short crops of small fruits and vegetables, and in some instances with raspberries and strawberries drying up on the bushes and vines before coming to maturity.

Prices, of course, had gone up in consequence, he said. According to the reports to The Produce News, no rain, not so much as a cooling shower, has fallen in the southern section of Connecticut in two weeks, greatly to the damage of the strawberry, raspberry, currant, and Irish potato crops, small produces which people of that section usually ship in large quantities at this time of year, and from which they make thousands of dollars. The yield was much smaller than was expected some time ago, and the berries and currants not nearly so large as they normally are. The reports showed that the people were much depressed over their loss.

Thousands of dollars' worth of raspberries and currants are shipped every year at this time from the Hudson River Valley. While some portion of these crops is shipped to the western part of the State, the far larger portion comes to this city, and as this market at this season is practically dependent on the Hudson River Valley and Southern Connecticut for much of its supply of raspberries and strawberries, the shoe, according to Produce News, is pinching heel and toe.

The situation is considered exceedingly grave by the farmers, and it is said to be greatly aggravated by the outbreak within the last few days of forest fires, which are burning furiously and so far unchecked through miles of dry timber. One of the biggest of these fires started a few days ago near Brown's Mills, N. J., not far from New Egypt, and, unchecked, has burnt over a path across the State toward Lakewood. The farmers have been unable to head it off, and thousands of dollars' worth of timber and other property have been destroyed by it. In a single case a cranberry bog at Hanover, owned by Joseph White, and valued at $25,000, has been licked out by the flames, with only a few charred branches left to mark the spot.

The loss to the farmers in small yields from their truck gardens and pastures has been even more serious in the aggregate than the loss by the forest fires. Fields which were green a month ago are now whitened and parched, with what grass is left as dry as tinder. Cows are running far short in yield of milk, and some of the wells are almost as dry as the fields. The streams are low, lower in some cases than known in years. From Millville comes the report that the berry crops are very short, the corn burning up, and the potatoes, on which the New Jersey farmer depends so largely, and all the vegetables suffering from the long dry spell.

The grip of the drought is equally tight and distressing in Eastern Pennsylvania. The Schuylkill has broken the low water record of forty years, the old men and women living along its banks saying it has not been so low since the Summer of 1869. Mills may have to close, and bridge piers and other objects in the river, which have not been seen by human eyes since they were put in place by the builders, have recently appeared above the surface. In some sections of East Pennsylvania dust in the roads is reported eight inches deep.

Many of the mills in the Hudson River valley, which depend upon reasonably full streams for their motive power, have had to close down within the last two weeks because of the low water. Some had to close down even earlier, the rainfall in June not being sufficient to fill the streams. A. Curtis, Acting Manager of the International Paper Company, 30 Broad Street, said yesterday that he had just received a letter from one of his pulpmill men up the Hudson saying that while he had been in that section six years he had never seen the streams so low. Many of the International's pulpmills in this section had to close down weeks ago. Mr. Curtis said there had been no forest fires this year near his company's property, and he thought that phase of the situation was well in hand.

A report was current yesterday that the City Water Department had begun to feel the pinch of low water in the streams which feed the city's reservoirs. Water Commissioner John O'Brien is in Europe on his vacation, but in his absence it was said at his office that the supply was still large enough to leave no fear of a water famine.

EXCHANGE DROPS AGAIN.

Further Decline Here, but Gold Shipments Don't Stop.

The decline in foreign exchange gained further headway yesterday, and at the close of the day there was shown a falling off of about half a cent to the pound sterling. This drop did not prevent a further engagement of gold for shipment to Argentina, but the possibility of additional shipments to Europe at this time was greatly lessened.

Canadian drafts on London were reported sold in this market in some quantity, and the day's discussion of the exchange position included references to the probable shipment of gold from New York to Canada. The Canadian banks at about this season frequently call on New York for additional supplies of gold, which go to strengthen the country's bank reserves against the demands which come a little later in connection with the crop movement.

The only gold actually withdrawn from the Sub-Treasury yesterday for shipment to Argentina, was $250,000, but further withdrawals were being considered for to-day.

CONSIDER SHIPPING RATES.

Southern Classification Committee Meets to Revise Schedules.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 13.—Representatives of big shipping interests appeared before the Southern Classification Committee at their meeting here to-day to consider the specifications for new paper pulp shipping cases, which are destined to take the place of wooden boxes because of the disappearance of lumber.

S. A. Ryan of New York, representing the makers of paper wrappers and bags, asked for a change in the classification so that paper bags and wrapping paper may be shipped together in carload lots to the South and Southwest. One hundred and fifty petitioners have already appeared to ask for changes in rates, which are being considered in secret meetings.

THE CHESAPEAKE BUYS CARS.

Road Orders 200 More, Making 3,500 Contracted For Since Jan. 1.

RICHMOND, Va., July 13.—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway placed an order yesterday for 200 freight cars with the American Car and Foundry Company, the Standard Steel Car Company, and the Pressed Steel Car Company of Pittsburg.

On Saturday an order for 1,000 steel hopper-bottom cars was given to the American Car and Foundry Company of Charleston, making a total of 3,500 ordered since Jan. 1. Fifty new locomotives are being built in Richmond for the same company.

Claflin Company's Earnings Gone Up.

The semi-annual statement of the H. B. Claflin Company, issued yesterday, for the period ended June 30, shows net earnings of $291,833, against a deficit of $7,436 in the same six months last year. The payment of dividends of $142,125 on the preferred stock and of $153,164 on the common stock left a deficit of $3,456, in comparison with a deficit of $302,725 for the same period in 1908. The deduction of the deficit from the surplus leaves that item at $1,781,990.

Receivers' Certificates Rights Upheld.

Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, signed an order yesterday holding that the $3,500,000 in receivers' certificates issued by Adrian H. Joline and Douglas Robinson, as receivers for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and William W. Ladd, as receiver for the New York City Railway Company, are entitled to all the rights of the old certificates. The issue was made to take up the old paper, which expired on June 15, 1908.

By EDWARD PAYSON WESTON.

Special to The New York Times.

SUISUN, Cal., July 13.—The heat was so intense yesterday, the thermometer 110 in the shade, that I did not reach Dixon until after midnight. In addition to sending two extra men to pilot me over the trestles, the Superintendent of the Sacramento Division of the Southern Pacific Railroad issued the following order to conductors and engineers

"Mr. Weston, pedestrian, is on district between Sacramento and Davis, walking. All engine men keep careful lookout for him on all trestles, and come to a stop if necessary when finding him on trestle to allow him to get to end of it."

Thus I was made free from anxiety, crossing five long trestles, on one of which I straddled a log within twelve inches of the track to allow a train to pass. I took a nap of two hours on a railroad truck in Dixon, and then came here, and shall go at least to Benecia to-night, thirty-seven miles, leaving about thirty-four miles to walk into San Francisco.

BRIGHTON TRACK CHANGES.

"Death's Turn" to be Wiped Out for Future Auto Races.

"Death's Turn" or "Death's Corner," as it has been variously termed, no longer will menace automobile race competitors on the Brighton Beach track. The Motor Racing Association, that has taken a lease of the property by the sea, which it is now converting into a motordrome, has determined to make the mile oval course not only the fastest and best at the distance in the world, but likewise the safest for competitors. With this end in view, the contour of the track is to be slightly altered. The dangerous turn, beginning at the old three-quarter pole, is to be entirely eliminated, and a new gradual curve is now under construction. This will bring the contestants fifteen feet nearer the ocean parkway end of the property than before. A similar change is to be made at the easterly end of the course, so as not to change the distance of the route. This arrangement will also permit of increased space for the entrance of automobiles via the Neptune Avenue gate.

The distance of the small car Marathon, so-called, that will precede the twenty-four-hour race on the afternoon of Friday, July 30, is likely to be an even 500 miles, that being the distance most favored by the majority of owners of fast light cars, who have expressed a desire to be represented in such a contest. The big international twenty-four-hour race, which is to be limited to sixteen stock cars, will be started during the evening of that day and be completed at the same hour on Saturday night. Entry blanks will be issued Thursday from the race headquarters at 1,540 Broadway.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Seeds for Ornamental Trees and Shrubs Held Not to be "Flower" Seeds.

According to a decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers made yesterday seeds for ornamental trees cannot be regarded for purposes of duty under the Dingley tariff as being "flower or grass seeds." This latter contention was raised by J. Dieterich, who imported the seeds in question for his estate at Los Angeles, Cal.

The seeds upon entry were assessed for duty by the Collector at the rate of 30 per cent. under the tariff provision for "seeds of all kinds not specially provided for." Besides making the claim for free entry as flower seeds, Mr. Dieterich set up a further contention for entry on the ground that the seeds should be regarded as "medible drugs." This latter claim, however, Judge Waite, who writes the decision for the board, refuses to consider.

Judge Waite, in overruling the claims for exemption of duty, says that the seeds of a shrub or tree are not intended to be included within the provision for flower seeds. It is therefore held that the Collector's classification is correct and must stand.

D. S. WALTON & CO. DISSOLVE.

Firm Is Solvent, but Partners Can No Longer Agree.

David S. Walton, senior partner in the old established firm of D. S. Walton & Co., wholesale dealers in paper and bags, at 132-140 Franklin Street and 5 and 7 Varick Street, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against Emily H. West and Douglas W. Mabee, the other two partners, for an accounting of the affairs of the partnership. Judge Erlanger yesterday afternoon signed an order authorizing Mr. Walton, under a bond of $25,000, to carry on the business pending the suit, and the Judge a referee to ascertain the value of the partnership property and the interests of the respective partners.

It was stated that the partnership is solvent and upon a liquidation there will be left for division among the partners over $400,000.

Mr. Walton formed the firm of D. S. Walton & Co. in 1881. In 1892 Senator George West of Ballston-Spa became a partner and continued until his death in September, 1900. His estate remained in the business until July, 1904.

Then another firm was formed, in which his son, George West, and Mr. Mabee became partners with Mr. Walton. Mr. Mabee is a son-in-law of the late Senator West. George West, the son, died on Jan. 25, 1906, and his widow, Emily H. West, succeeded to his interest in the firm.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull and Irregular—Call Money Rates, 1¾@2 Per Cent.

TRADING IS PROFESSIONAL

Sharp Break in Foreign Exchange Rates—Banks Returning Treasury Deposits to Washington.

As little importance attached to yesterday's dip in prices on the Stock Exchange as to the corresponding rise on Monday. Both movements received their impetus from the efforts of a very small number of traders on the floor of the Stock Exchange and speculators in brokerage offices to make a day's wage. With their endeavors the public at large are naturally very little concerned. The only fact worth noting is that the real tendency of securities is toward stability and inactivity pending more certain knowledge of agricultural returns. Grain markets were inclined to strength following the slight reaction of the previous day, but no occasion for higher prices was to be found in any of the day's news bearing upon the crop position. The weekly weather report of the Government was an acceptable document, and fully as reassuring was the weekly crop report of the Rock Island system, which covers a great deal of the territory visited last week by the heavy rains which caused the dissemination of so much gloomy news. According to the reports of the railroad officials whose inquiries made up the Rock Island statement the only effect of the rainfall has been to delay harvesting here and there along the company's lines; no permanent damage to the crops was found. On the Cotton Exchange, where the movement of prices is under close scrutiny owing to the important part which cotton exports play in our foreign trade, moderate recessions from Monday's sharp advances occurred. The continued absence of rainfall over much of the cotton crop country is serving to keep the trade in an unsettled state of mind. Reflecting the improvement in conditions in the mercantile world were the announcement of an advance in the price of print goods at Fall River and the earnings statement of one of the largest dry goods companies of this city, which for the first six months of the present year noted net earnings of $291,000, where in the same period a year ago a deficit of $7,436 was incurred. In a general way the proceedings of the conference committee in Washington are being closely watched by the financial community, and the feeling is that unless Mr. Taft makes clearly known at this time the sort of a bill he will not veto, his subsequent disapproval of the tariff measure will result in additional and vexatious delay and will effectively check the rising tide of business.

On money markets the important development of the day was a break of half a cent in sterling exchange. For the moment the resultant decline in rates to the lowest level touched since February last promises to interrupt the flow of gold from this city, but money conditions here are such as to bring within the probabilities a prompt recovery. During the course of the day over $800,000 gold was withdrawn for shipment to South American points, and preliminary arrangements were made for heavy additional exports. As a result of the gold movement of the week and the early return by a number of banks of Government deposits on the installment which must be turned in by Thursday, local institutions have been losing steadily to the Sub-Treasury, the adverse balance reaching $4,000,000 yesterday morning.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Dullness and Reaction.

No one took the trouble to go into any elaborate explanation of the reaction in the market yesterday, and it was accepted as logical or natural, or, at all events, without significance. The weather may have had something to do with the lethargy of the traders or their inability to find reasons fitting and seasonable for the lower prices. The brokers reported that their customers took so little interest in the weaker tone that few selling orders were received even from the timid ones. It does not follow that the selling was so extremely limited, for the reason that some of the floor reports professed to see good selling in some of the important stocks. The floor reports, however, are not to be accepted as conclusive, a fact which has impressed itself time and again on traders who operate either on inspiration or tips. The Street was dull, the market was duller than even the total sales indicated, and the brokers were not consumed with energy directed toward the development of a trading spirit in their customers. There was an air of passivity around trading orders which seemed to be prophetic of even more dull times to come.

***

Increased Dividend Talk.

When there is nothing else doing, there is always an opportunity to talk about increased dividends, and the chance was availed of yesterday, as usual. Every railroad company and industrial company which has not increased its dividend within the last six or eight months was a subject of gossip, and the possibilities in the way of dividend increases were wonderful, judging by the gossip. Serious attention was paid to the talk concerning Illinois Central. That is not a new topic, and the impulse was given, presumably, by the strength of the stock. There is no limit to the reasons adduced for increasing the dividend on this. Some of them are matter of fact enough, and some are so plainly highfaluting that they are unworthy of consideration. Brokers try to limit their information to customers to the practical things, such as earnings, business, and dominant ownership. The last would appear to be the influential item with the average trader.

***

Varied Views on Business.

There is a difference of opinion, if one may judge by the various advices of brokerage houses to their clients, concerning the business situation. Some of these advices assert that business is not only normal, but extraordinary, that record figures are being established in many lines, and that this fact itself shows conclusively that a big market may be expected for an indefinite period. There are other houses whose figures or whose views are more conservative and there are some ultra conservative, although they could not be classified as pessimistic. One interesting letter stated that one condition in business that ought not to be overlooked is that there is a lack of uniformity. In other words, that the prosperity of one section and the activity in certain lines are not duplicated in other sections and that generally speaking, there is a spotty effect noticeable when reports on various lines and from various sections are collated and analyzed. These facts, however, are regarded as of little consequence by professional traders, by traders who are neither professional nor amateur and by brokers who furnish the means for speculative enterprise in the market.

***

Copper Stocks Heavy.

Some of the Copper stocks were heavy enough yesterday to resurrect the rumor that liquidation of the Rogers holdings is going on. Inasmuch as a definite knowledge of the Rogers holdings is not general, any rumor of that kind can be accepted by the credulous as sufficiently explanatory. The general market and other specific stocks showed a decidedly heavy tone at times, but the explanations were more general than in the matter of the copper securities. The character of the trading in these stocks is somewhat of a puzzle. Taking for example one representative house with a goodly number of customers and with accounts well margined, it is surprising to learn that only one customer has any line of copper securities. The others have no objection to them whatever, but they are concerned with other securities. Some of these other traders, too, are good speculators, which means that they do not limit themselves to one or two stocks and will take on any security that interests them or indicates possibility as a profit producer.

***

Satisfied with Crops.

Whether any one is concerned with the crops at the moment is difficult to determine. There is a perfunctory interest in crop news, but the general attitude is the same as if the crops were harvested and the exact total of the corn and wheat yield definitely estimated. Nevertheless, the possibility of crop scares is not entirely eliminated, it being remembered that the average crop scare consists of a small proportion of weather news, a large proportion of imagination, supplemented to a greater or less degree by the exigencies of the important interests in the grain markets. Some brokers profess to believe that the relation between the various markets and the influences governing each one of them is growing less day by day. They assert that the doings in the grain market have not the direct influence on stocks that were exercised at one time, which would seem to indicate possibly something artificial in the things which go to make up the influences in the grain market. The same is said of the cotton market, but whether this is just plain speculation or warranted by conditions is difficult to understand, and the statistical data at hand is neither conclusive nor interesting.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Daily Consular and Trade Reports give foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding these can be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to.

3,622. FURNACE CONSTRUCTION.—A report from an American Consul in Canada tells of the construction of two large furnaces by a certain corporation. One of these, an open-hearth furnace, is about completed. The other, a blast furnace, is just being started, and it will require eighteen months to be completed. It will cost nearly a million dollars when finished.

3,623. HARDWARE AND GLASSWARE.—An American Consul in a Latin-American country furnishes the name of a firm handling hardware, glassware, and tinware from the United States. This concern buys direct from manufacturers, and is satisfied with the quality, packing, and terms of payment relative to this class of goods, and will consider additional connections.

3,624. MAHOGANY VENEER AND LOGS.—A business house in Asia informs an American Consul there that it desires to communicate with firms on the Pacific Coast making a business of veneering in mahogany and the sale of mahogany logs.

3,625. RAILWAY SUPPLIES.—A report has been received from a Consul in Canada giving the name of a company in his district engaged in extending two railways of importance. The first extension will be, including a branch-line, a distance of about 140 miles. The second, requiring much trestling and bridge work, will be a distance of 36 miles. The work must be completed not later than 1911. The Consul further states that practically all the machinery and most of the material will be purchased in the United States.

3,626. CARRIAGE BUILDERS' MATERIALS.—An American Consular officer in the West Indies forwards the address of a business man in his district, who desires to be put in touch with manufacturers of all kinds of carriage builders' materials.

3,627. LARD.—The American Consul in a European country reports that a certain firm in his district desires to represent an American house in that territory for the sale of American lard. This firm is of long standing, claims thorough familiarity with the trade, and presents a number of references as to character.

3,628. HARDWARE, PAINTS, AND FIREARMS.—In a recent report from a Latin-American country the American Consul there gives the name of the largest hardware firm in his district. This firm handles carpenters' tools, agricultural implements, lampware, carriage woodware, paints, firearms, dynamite, cartridges, &c.

3,629.—ASBESTOS.—A New Orleans exporter writes that he is in receipt of an inquiry for addresses of firms in the United States who produce asbestos in large quantities.

3,630. HARDWARE, GLASSWARE, FURNITURE, LEATHER, &c.—An importing house in the West Indies handles American hardware, glassware, furniture, carriage materials, leather, enamel cloth, &c. The American Consul in a report states that this firm buys direct from the manufacturer, and is in the main satisfied with the quality, but is open to further business connections.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Improved Weather Breaks Advance—Close 10 to 17 Points Net Lower.

Cotton made new high records at the opening yesterday, but then became very nervous and unsettled. The close was steady at a net loss of 10@17 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 9 to 13 points, with October contracts selling at 12.85c and December at 12.87c during the first few minutes, but these unprecedentedly high prices, considering the season of the year, attracted very heavy profit taking. The Texas weather report showed that twenty stations had maximum temperatures ranging from 100 to 106 degrees during the past twenty-four hours. Crop reports from other sections were more encouraging as a result of the recent improved weather. Liverpool was a little better than due at the New York opening, but followed the American decline.

Contract prices were as follows:

Spot cotton was quiet at 13.15c for middling upland and 13.40c for middling Gulf. Sales nil.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Galveston steady, ⅛c higher, at 12½c; sales, 200 bales. Mobile firm, ⅛c higher, at 12¼c; sales, 300 bales. Savannah steady, 3-16c higher, at 12⅝c; sales, 900 bales. Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 12⅛c; sales, 37 bales. Augusta steady ⅛c higher at 12⅞c; sales, 262 bales. New Orleans steady, unchanged at 12 9-16c; sales, 1,350 bales. Memphis firm, ⅛c higher, at 12⅜c; sales, 200 bales.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

The coffee market was barely steady yesterday, July being the only month to hold its ground. The close was steady, net unchanged to 10 points lower. The decline followed a diminishing demand for the near months from shorts and a rapidly increasing Brazilian movement. Sales were reported of 25,250 bags.

The market opened quiet, at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points, only one month showing any loss at the start. European markets were about a stand-off, with Havre unchanged to ¼ franc higher, while Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ pfennig lower. The only change reported in the Brazilian markets was an advance of 50 reis in Rio 7s. Spot coffee was quiet, 7⅝ to 7¾c for Rio No. 7.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Securities Close Easy on the London Exchange.

LONDON, July 13.—The supply of money on the market to-day exceeded the demand, and discounts were firm.

On the Stock Exchange dealers were busy with the settlement, and this, together with the new issues that are coming out freely, restricted fresh business, especially in gilt-edged securities and Kaffirs, which were again easier. Mexican rails and foreign bonds were active and firmer.

During the early trading the dealings in American securities were of fair dimensions and well over parity. Then the market became quiet and at noon was dull, with prices unchanged to half a point higher than yesterday's New York closing. Business remained dull until the receipt of the Wall Street opening, when selling caused a general recession and the market closed easy. Wabash preferred was an exception, being firm.

Bar silver quiet, 23½d per ounce.

Money, ½@¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1⅛@1 5-16 per cent.; for three months' bills, 1⅛@1 3-16 per cent.

PARIS, July 13.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was dull and prices were steady.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 60c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 18½c for checks.

BERLIN, July 13.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was weak.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 13.—The stock market was unusually dull even for midsummer. North Butte was weak once more, but only a few hundred shares were traded in. There was a little business in Butte Coalition and Amalgamated, but most of the coppers and other local specialties were neglected.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Steel shares were again the mainstay of the local market, but trading was on a much smaller scale than yesterday, with the exception of Cambria Steel. Pennsylvania was fairly firm on moderate trading. General Asphalt issues advanced over a point, each on light trading. Rapid Transit was easier.

Is Real Estate Liquid?

We received an application for an excellent mortgage loan at 10:30 A. M. It was accepted immediately. The title to the property having been previously examined by us, we were able to continue the searches and close the transaction by 1 o'clock P. M., although this involved sending papers up-town for the signature of the owner's wife. At 1:45 P. M. the mortgage was purchased by an investor, and at 2:40 P. M. it was paid for and delivered. Thus, well within the limits of one business day, a real estate transaction was wholly consummated, which under old-fashioned conditions might have taken a month or more.

Our locality plant is the most modern and effective in existence.

BAKER APPOINTS BOORAEM DEPUTY

Assistant Corporation Counsel Sworn In and Put in Charge of Brooklyn Police.

ACCEPTS WITH A CONDITION

Will Return to His Former Place If Tammany Wins in the Election.

Police Commissioner Baker announced the appointment of a Fourth Deputy Commissioner yesterday to take charge of the Brooklyn Headquarters. He is Alfred W. Booraem, and, like Third Deputy Stover, has been for some years in the Corporation Counsel's office. His special qualification for his detail to Brooklyn is a life-long residence in that borough.

Mr. Booraem lives at 204 Lincoln Place and is 34 years old. He was educated at the Brooklyn Polytechnic and was graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1897, being admitted to the bar in the following year. Commissioner Baker said he had had Mr. Booraem in mind for a week, but that he had asked to be allowed to settle up a number of personal matters before he was sworn in.

He is well posted on police matters, but in any changes that he may make in police administration in Brooklyn and Queens he will consult the Commissioner. He will not hold trials, but will leave that to Deputy Stover. He was sworn in yesterday at the City Hall by Acting Mayor McGowan after a visit to Police Headquarters, and he then left for his new post. He has as his staff there three Lieutenants, three sergeants, and a dozen patrolmen.

This is not the first city appointment which the new deputy has held. After a year in the law offices of Coudert Brothers he entered the Finance Department as an assistant accountant. He served there under Controllers Coler and Grout, and in 1902 he became Assistant Secretary under Col. R. G. Monroe in the Department of Water Supply.

He was made Assistant Corporation Counsel by Corporation Counsel Rives in May, 1903, and was promoted by Mr. Rives's successors, Mr. Delany, Mr. Ellison, and Mr. Pendleton. He had a good deal to do with the 80-cent gas fight, and has been largely engaged since that was brought to a successful conclusion in contract suits brought by contractors against the city for additional compensation.

In politics Mr. Booraem considers himself a Democrat, although he is not a member of any political clubs. He is a sergeant in Squadron A and is known as one of the best riders in the organization, having won several prizes for roughriding. He has taken office with the understanding that he will return to the Corporation Counsel's office next January if the Democrats remain in power.

Three transfers were made yesterday at headquarters. Lieut. Charles G. Mcad, who is a member of the bar and was high in favor with Gen. Bingham, was ordered from the Third Deputy Commissioner's office to the East Twenty-second Street Station. Lieut. John R. Tyler, who was in charge of the Bureau of Repairs and Supplies, and had close relations with ex-Deputy Commissioner Hanson, was sent to the Fifth Street Station, and First Grade Detective Nelson J. Merrill was ordered back to patrol duty at the West Twentieth Street Station. Merrill was the man who was sent to Baltimore by Commissioner Bingham to look into the connection of Inspector McLaughlin and Lieut. Frank Peabody with the Howard Gould case.

THREE MURDER ARRESTS.

Two Girls and a Young Man Held as Witnesses by the Police.

The principal development of yesterday in the murder mysteries, which up to the present have baffled the detective bureau, was the arrest of two girls, who may know something of the fate of Ung Gow, found beaten to death on July 1 in his laundry, at 14 Stanton Street. The police, however, believe that this crime is of the usual sordid variety and has nothing at all to do with the murder of Elsie Sigel or the picturesque war of the Hip Sing Tong and the On Leong Tong.

The women arrested were Sadie Brodie and Fannie Miller, both of 85 Second Street. John J. Carlo of 8 Beach Street also was taken to the Elizabeth Street Police Station, because he was in the company of the Miller girl. He is held as a suspicious person, but the police believe he had really nothing to do with the murder. They are, however, anxious to come across another girl, who is known to them as Lily.

These three girls were frequenters of Ung Gow's laundry, and Sadie Brodie says she was his wife. They disappeared after the murder, and it was only yesterday that a spy brought word to Capt. Galvin of the Elizabeth Street Station.

"Fannie is now at the Chinese Delmonico's, 24 Pell Street," he said.

There the Miller girl was found with Carlo, and both were arrested. The girl told where she lived, and the detectives, hurrying there, caught Sadie Brodie. The girls admitted being at Ung Gow's laundry the day before the murder, but professed that they knew nothing about it. Since then they had been at Coney Island, and had only just returned to the city. Asked why they had gone away, they both said:

"Because we did not want to be mixed up in the murder."

Later they were taken before Coroner Hoburger and committed to the House of Detention as material witnesses. The Coroner was informed that as they waited outside his office, one said to the other:

"Now, don't you dare squeal."

The theory of the police is that Ung Gow was known to have on his person a considerable sum of money, as he had to pay next day $250 on the laundry he had just bought, and he was beaten and robbed, perhaps, by white men for the sake of this sum. They hope to get a clue of some sort from the Brodie and Miller girls.

Prof. George A. Ferguson is busy at his laboratory, 121 West Forty-second Street, on an investigation of the possibility of Elsie Sigel having being poisoned. Last night he said:

"I have not yet finished my investigation, which I was only directed by the District Attorney to begin on June 29. It is necessarily slow, as I have to test for all poisons. I hope to finish to-morrow, but till I do I cannot make any definite statement. I can, however, say that I have come across indications which make it well worth while continuing to investigate."

Speaking of the poisons Chinamen are likely to use the professor said they would be as likely as not the cyanides which produce asphyxiation. They are also thoroughly conversant with opium and can use it in such a way as to kill a person without making it feasible for any one to say that the death was intentional.

Prof. Ferguson reports to the District Attorney, and Capt. Carey was asked yesterday if his bureau had anything new in the Sigel case.

"Nothing new," he answered.

"And the Bersin case?"

"Investigations are proceeding."

"The Thirteenth Street woman—is she identified?"

"She is not."

"Can you tell anything of Pogano's murderers?"

"We know nothing of them."

DELAY IN THE STABER CASE.

Her Slayers Can't Be Tried Until the October Term.

Acting District Attorney Elder of Brooklyn announced yesterday that the slayers of Mrs. Sophia Staber at her home, 455 East Eighteenth Street, Flatbush, must wait for trial until the October term of the County Court. He said there were legal impediments in the way of an earlier trial.

"Repeated inquiries have been made of me as to whether I would move at once the indictment against Giro and Schliermann for trial, or whether the trial will have to wait until the Fall," said Mr. Elder. "Communications that I have received in considerable number seem to indicate that it is the opinion of a large portion of the public that this indictment should be tried at once.

"Whichever course might be preferable, the law in this instance imposes an obstacle in the way of an immediate trial. Aside from the fact that in this county the only trial court in which this indictment could be moved sits but three days more, a period which would probably be insufficient for the careful disposition of such an important case, the law does not permit the District Attorney to move separate trials for two men indicted conjointly, as are Giro and Schliemann.

"The defense in this case could demand separate trials, and the demand could not be refused under the statute. The prosecution, however, must move the trial of the two together, and has no discretion under the law."

Mr. Elder said that as Schliemann is ill in the hospital, the only alternative is to let the case against the two men rest until October. Giro, however, will be arraigned on the indictment for murder in the first degree on Friday before Judge Dike in the County Court.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 13.—It was learned here to-day from the New York police that the thief who was shot in the Staber home in Brooklyn, and now in a hospital, has confessed to robbing the Perkins home in this city. Miss Grace Perkins, it was said, will go to Police Headquarters in New York tomorrow and look over some of the things found in the burglars' home in the hope of identifying articles taken from her home.

The robbery of the Misses Perkins's house in South Street occurred in November. It was sensational, in that the burglars went to the bedroom of the maiden women, and at the point of pistols, ordered them to keep still.

One of the robbers talked to Miss Grace Perkins and told her that the reason they had entered her house to rob was because they had children at home who were crying for bread.

FREAKS IN BERING SEA.

Mountain Peaks Obliterated, New Islands Created, Lagoon Closed.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The obliteration of two imposing mountain peaks, the transforming of a lagoon into a lake, and the bringing into existence of two islands are the astonishing feats of nature discovered in Bering Sea by a Government party and reported to the Treasury Department to-day.

In that stretch of water, which is a swiftly moving current, is the island of Bogoslof, where constantly changing conformation has more than once attracted widespread attention. A report received by Captain-Commandant Ross of the revenue cutter service says that a party from the revenue cutter Perry landed on Bogoslof on June 10, made a cursory examination of the island, and found that a number of important changes had taken place since last year.

Perry Peak and McCulloch Peak, which heretofore loomed high in the air, have disappeared, and the opening of the bay or lagoon, a pretty spot shown in pictures on file in the Treasury Department, has closed up, forming a lake of warm salt water of a temperature of about 71 degrees. The lake is slightly below sea level, and in its centre two small islands have sprung up. One of these islands is throwing off a volume of steam.

BRYAN QUERY TO TAFT.

Why Not Amend the Constitution Permitting Popular Election of Senators?

LINCOLN, Neb., July 13.—William J. Bryan to-day addressed a letter to President Taft asking him to allow the people to vote on popular election of Senators. Mr. Bryan says:

> President Taft: Now that the States are going to vote on the ratification of the amendment specifically authorizing an income tax, why not give them a chance to vote on an amendment providing for the election of United States Senators by popular vote? In your speech of acceptance you said that you were personally inclined to favor such change in the Constitution. Would this not be an opportune time to present the subject to Congress?
>
> Two constitutional amendments, one authorizing an income tax and the other providing for the popular election of Senators, would make your Administration memorable, and I pledge you whatever assistance I can render in securing the ratification of these amendments.
>
> With great respect, I am, yours truly,
>

MILLION SEE EXPOSITION.

Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Visitors in 42 Days Were 1,015,272.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 13.—With an attendance yesterday of 24,601, the total attendance for the first forty-two days of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition passed the million mark. The grand total is 1,015,272. This surpasses the record of the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and also that of the Jamestown Exposition.

In the former case the million mark was reached at the end of sixty-five days, and at Jamestown it was nearly three months before the turnstiles recorded 1,000,000 admissions.

JURY GETS ALPACA COATS.

If the County Objects to Their Cost Boston Judge Will Pay.

BOSTON, July 13.—Alpaca coats for jurymen were introduced in the Superior Criminal Court to-day by order of Judge R. O. Harris. The Judge stated that he desired the jurymen to be comfortable during the hot weather, and had ordered the coats, the cost to be paid by the County Treasury.

If there should be any demurrer to the step, he said, he would pay the bill himself.

Reuben Lindheim Will Filed.

The will of Reuben Lindheim, who died at Larchmont Manor in Westchester County on July 8, filed for probate yesterday, leaves his entire estate, estimated in the accompanying petition at "more than $10,000," to his widow, Hortense C. Lindheim. His son, Morin R. Lindheim, lives at 103 East Seventy-seventh Street.

10-Year-Old Boys Held as Burglars.

Two ten-year-old burglars were caught early yesterday morning after they had forced an entrance into the candy and cigar store of Anthony Lurzel at 97 Grand Street, Williamsburg. A woman saw them rifling the cash register and called the Bedford Avenue police. They arrested William Ritter of 104 Grand Street and John Breen of 95 Grand Street.

CITY BREVITIES.

Gustave Schwab, a silk merchant, 55 years old, of 353 West 102d Street, was overcome by the heat at 152d Street and Broadway last evening and removed to Washington Heights Hospital.

William Shields, until a week ago employed in the stable of Charles Pfizer, of the firm of Charles Pfizer & Co., manufacturing chemists at 81 Maiden Lane, at 241 West Sixty-eighth Street, committed suicide last night in front of the stable.

Judge Lacombe in the United States Circuit Court signed an order yesterday in the foreclosure proceedings brought by the Guaranty Trust Company against the Second Avenue Railroad Company, giving the complainant until Aug. 9 and the defendant until Sept. 9 to take testimony, and from the latter date to Oct. 9 to take testimony in rebuttal.

M'CARREN QUIZZES BOSTON LEGISLATORS

"It's a Dead Heat," He Says, at Investigation of Direct Primaries There.

SOME SPEAKERS DOUBTFUL

Think Massachusetts System Fails—"Professional Politician Better Than Business Man," Says One.

BOSTON, July 13.—The committee of the New York Legislature which is investigating the direct nomination and joint caucus system in Massachusetts, to-day heard views both in favor and in opposition to the plan adopted in thirty-three cities and a number of towns in Massachusetts. Representative William F. Garcelon of Newton and former Representative William F. Murray of Charlestown were heard. Senator McCarren of the New York delegation was a pointed questioner of the speakers.

Mr. Garcelon expressed some doubt of the success of the joint primary system in small cities and towns. He said in his own ward fourteen votes were cast at an expense of $156, which gave rise to the opinion that while the law may be a very good thing in compact districts, he did not think that Massachusetts has experimented with the system sufficiently to warrant its adoption for the entire State.

Mr. Garcelon said that the evils of the convention system exist in Massachusetts as they do in New York, but that the direct nomination system also had its evils.

"As I understand it, the direct nominations system is predicated upon two assumptions," said Senator McCarren of the visiting committee. "These are that a larger number of voters participate in the primary and that you get a better class of candidates."

"The direct nominations system does induce more voters to participate," said Mr. Garcelon, "but I don't believe it improves the character of the candidates."

Mr. Garcelon said that from what members of the Massachusetts House of Representatives had told him, the plan worked well in some cases and badly in others.

"In other words," interjected Senator McCarren, "it's a dead heat."

"It's a dead heat, that's just it," answered Mr. Garcelon.

Mr. Garcelon then said he was a great believer in publicity in expenditures for nominations and elections, but that the Massachusetts law was so definite that a man does not know just what returns to make under it.

Mr. Garcelon was asked if he thought direct nominations would work well in a State such as New York, where no educational qualification was required of voters, and where a large proportion can neither read nor write. He thought that in the end there would be a return to the old condition, as the question would simply be as to who controlled a particular ward and in whose interest election officials were selected.

"Powerful influences," opposed to the direct nomination of school committeemen in Boston, explained why that body was excepted from the operations of the Luce law, in the belief of former Representative William F. Murray of Charlestown.

Senator McCarren asked:

"Could a bill for the direct nomination of the Boston school committee pass your Legislature?"

Mr. Murray replied that it could not, on account of the same powerful influences he had mentioned.

Mr. Murray said he believed good men are elected under the direct nominations system, but he did not believe that a candidate should be drafted for a position; rather he should be compelled to get out and "hustle" for it.

"I believe a professional politician would make a better servant than a business man, given equal ability and honesty," declared Mr. Murray.

Senator McCarren asked his opinions as to the net result of direct nominations in Boston, and Mr. Murray answered that the system had brought to the front many young men of good type.

Former Representative Robert Luce, the sponsor of the law, wrote to the committee that the greatest benefit of the law was that it had broken down the rotation in office theory and permitted the retention of a useful servant as long as he was willing to serve.

Nathan Matthews, Chairman of the former Finance Commission, spoke to the committee at the afternoon hearing. He said that the seven members of that body had been unanimously of the opinion that it was unwise to continue the old system of direct nominations in Boston. The nominees of both parties had ceased to be representative men, he said, and the system had been destructive of party organization. No opportunity had been given for a campaign of principle because there was no convention to determine the party principles, so it became a campaign of personalities. Direct nominations, he declared, had hurt both parties in this State, but especially the Democratic Party.

"One party has gone to pieces, the other is going," he said.

Mr. Matthews believed that direct nominations were but a stepping stone to the establishment of a Socialist propaganda.

Former Congressman John A. Sullivan, Chairman of the new Finance Commission, said that he found the class of public officials had deteriorated.

State Representative David B. Shaw of Charlestown, former Election Commissioner, believed that direct nominations brought out the best candidates.

MAGIC FACTORY AFIRE.

Flames Appeared Mysteriously and the Firemen Had to Guess Some.

Like all genuine displays of magic, a fire in the workshop of Theodore Bamberg, manufacturers of conjurors' supplies and magical goods, on the second floor of 1,185 Broadway yesterday afternoon, caused considerable guessing on the part of the firemen.

Bamberg's magic factory is in the four-story brick building at the northwest corner of Twenty-eighth Street and Broadway, which is leased by Keith & Proctor. Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre is in the same building.

Arthur McKinley, one of Bamberg's helpers, was at work on a piece of magic yesterday, when he suddenly found himself surrounded by flames. Neiusco, a conjuror, who happened to be in the office, dragged McKinley out of the burning room. McKinley's hands and neck were burned.

Some one on Broadway seeing the smoke turned in an alarm, and the firemen put out the fire with hand apparatus. Traffic was blocked on Broadway for about half an hour.

Several explosions were caused among the magic acids in the factory, and the smoke caused the firemen a great deal of trouble.

The flames did not spread outside of Bamberg's rooms.

TRY TO BUY SON'S RELEASE.

Parents of Boy Held for Peddling Ask What Freedom Will Cost.

When Justice Wyatt in the Children's Court yesterday committed to the Jewish Protectory thirteen-year-old Jacob Cohen of 75 Rivington Street for peddling the boy's mother became much excited in the courtroom. She fell to the floor and began beating her head and pulling out her hair before policemen removed her.

The mother went away, but returned presently with her husband, Abraham Cohen, and the two beseiged Chief Clerk Coulter. Failing to enlist the clerk's support in influencing the Justice to release the boy, the mother ended by asking:

"How much money will it take?"

Clerk Le Mon told them money would not help them.

Later the father and mother appealed to Justice Wyatt. They promised to leave "for another country" if their boy was released.

"To what other country will you go?" asked the Justice.

"To Chicago," replied the father, but even this did not move the Justice.

SAYLER'S BROTHER WINS MOB.

Persuades It Not to Avenge the Banker's Murder.

WATSEKA, Ill., July 13.—The murder of J. B. Sayler, Vice President of the First National Bank of Crescent City, by Dr. W. R. Miller, a well-known physician of Crescent City, has aroused indignation and excitement throughout this vicinity. William Sayler, a brother of the slain man, is credited with having quieted a crowd at Crescent City, which talked of taking mob vengeance on Dr. Miller and Mrs. Sayler. He is said to have visited the leaders with pacific counsel, and persuaded them to let the law take its course.

Ira Grunder, a brother of Mrs. Sayler, who gave himself up to the Sheriff, says that on the day of the murder when Mr. Sayler was absent from home Mrs. Sayler, Dr. Miller, John Grunder, father of Mrs. Sayler, and he himself had been drinking. Grunder said that he had been so overcome by the effect of the drink that he slept through the excitement attending the shooting.

Dr. Miller, the Grunders, and Mrs. Sayler are in jail. No move to secure their release on bail has been made. Miller is held on the charge of murder; the others as accessories.

According to W. R. Nightingale, cashier of the bank of which Mr. Sayler was Vice President, Mr. Sayler, before he made a trip out of town, showed him an envelope containing papers.

"He always said to me after these trips," said Mr. Nightingale, "'Should anything happen to me, open this packet and follow to the letter the instructions contained therein.'

"After each trip but the last he destroyed the papers upon his return. He was away a little while ago, but when he came back he failed to follow this practice. That packet, I believe, is locked in his private box in the bank's vault. The Coroner has the key and will open the box later, possibly after the funeral tomorrow."

Dr. Miller's defense is that he shot only when attacked by the banker with a hatchet.

John Grunden declared at the inquest that Sayler brought a hatchet into the house with him. Mrs. Sayler says that her husband came in unarmed and took the hatchet from under a couch.

Mrs. Sayler said in the jail to-day:

"Dr. Miller and I have been much in each other's company for the last two years and my husband seemed to approve. He always knew where and when we went together, and never objected. He and I never had a quarrel on the subject."

Dr. Miller said the whole thing was somewhat hazy to him, and that he did not care to discuss the case further than to say that he shot in self-defense.

NEW BUILDING FOR SHANLEYS.

Brothers Purchase Childs Structure in West 34th Street for Investment.

The Shanley brothers, who now have restaurants in Times Square, at 1,204 Broadway, near Thirtieth Street, and at 383 Sixth Avenue, have purchased the twelve-story Childs Building at 108 West Thirty-fourth Street, between the Savoy Theatre and the Saks Building. It was learned last night from an authoritative source that the deal was for cash. The United States Realty and Improvement Company, which controlled the property, has held it for $850,000. John P. Kirwin was the broker.

"My brother and I have bought the property as an investment," said Thomas Shanley last night. "Naturally we have bought it with a view to using it for one of our restaurants should occasion to do so arise. We would not have bought it if its location did not make it available for such use by us, but for the present we do not expect to establish a restaurant there. The Childs Company has a long lease on the property, and is paying a rent that is satisfactory to us. I understand there are few, if any, vacant rooms in the building."

The Childs Company, lessee of the entire building, occupied several floors, subletting the others. The plot is 47.3 by 98.9, and is only 78 feet from Broadway. The twelve-story office building on the site, erected only a few years ago, is considered as good as new.

Thomas Shanley said last night that the next building erected by the brothers would be for their new restaurant at the other end of Times Square to take the place of the present building when the lease of that expires.

SAVES BOY HE ENDANGERED.

John R. Drexel's Chauffeur Wrecks Auto to Avoid Boy on Bicycle.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 13.—To John Oldham, chauffeur for John R. Drexel, Joseph Williamson, a boy of 16, owes his life. Oldham nearly sacrificed his own life in saving Williamson and damaged the automobile to the extent of more than a thousand dollars.

Oldham had gone from Mr. Drexel's home this forenoon to the Casino and was proceeding along Bellevue Avenue running north, when, at Narragansett Avenue, a street running east and west in the heart of the cottage colony, the boy on a bicycle shot over Bellevue Avenue.

In crossing Bellevue Avenue the boy and his bicycle were so close to the automobile that Oldham had to act quickly to save the lad's life. The power was shut off and the emergency brake applied, but the front of the big automobile struck the large tree just at the driveway of the Osgood villa. The impact was so great that the chauffeur was thrown out. The machine backed across Bellevue Avenue, before the residence of Paul A. Andrews, where it stopped, badly damaged.

Oldham was warmly praised by those who saw the accident. The boy was so frightened when the automobile struck the tree that he fell off his bicycle. He had to be assisted to the seat again after he had picked up the provisions he was carrying to one of the Summer residents.

MISS MARGARET BOYLE LOST.

Went for a Walk on Saturday and Has Not Been Seen Since.

Miss Margaret Boyle of 2,473 Grand Avenue, the Bronx, has been missing since Saturday, and the police have been asked to find her.

Shortly before 6 o'clock on Saturday she told her mother she was going out for a walk. She was asked to stop at a bakery and buy some bread for dinner. She has not been home since. At 6:30 o'clock on Saturday a girl answering her description, told a policeman at Broadway and 181st Street that she was lost, and asked him how to get home. He put her on a green crosstown car. The police know of no one who saw her after that.

Miss Boyle is 21 years old, is 5 feet 6 inches in height, has blue eyes, and a dark complexion. She wore a white skirt and a white sweater when she left home. She enjoyed an excellent reputation in her neighborhood. She had not been ill, nor, according to her mother, had ever before been lost. She is nervous, however, and Mrs. Boyle thinks it possible that she lost her memory.

The police have had the case since Sunday.

Wounded Cuban Speaker Arrives.

Among the arrivals on the Ward liner Havana yesterday from Havana were Mr. and Mrs. Orestes Ferrara, who are on their way to Europe. Mr. Ferrara is the Speaker of the Cuban House of Representatives. He had his hand in a bandage, owing, it was said, to a wound he had recently received in a duel with a members of the House, who had insulted him in debate.

COURT OVERRULES THE SERVICE BOARD

Appellate Division Orders That a Franchise Be Granted to the South Shore Railroad.

CAN'T DICTATE CONDITIONS

Board Has No Power to Pass Upon the Terms of a Franchise, the Court Declares.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday overruled the Public Service Commission in its refusal to approve the franchise granted by the Board of Estimate to the South Shore Traction Company to operate cars over the Queensboro Bridge, and ordered the commission to grant the application of the road and pay it $50 in costs. The opinion was written by Justice Ingraham, Justices McLaughlin, Laughlin, Clarke, and Houghton assenting. The latter, however, wrote a separate opinion, in which he differed with his colleagues on several of their findings with regard to the powers of the commission.

The commission refused to grant the franchise purely on its terms, admitting the necessity for the immediate operation of cars across the bridge. In its decision on the matter it declared that under the franchise the road was given the right for fifty years to one of the most important thoroughfares between Jamaica and Long Island City, and that future extensions were not sufficiently provided for.

The road, through its counsel, Clarence Lexow, backed by the city through the Corporation Counsel, immediately took the matter to the courts.

In its decision the court holds:

> Necessity or convenience for the public service was the single question the commission was authorized to determine, and upon the determination of that question depended the permission of approval.
>
> The Public Service Commission had no right to arbitrarily reject an application because of the action of the local authorities in granting or refusing their consent.
>
> If a railroad over the proposed route was required by the public; was necessary or convenient for the public service, then it was the duty of the commission to grant the application, and as I understand from the return that they have determined that the proposed railroad was required, the denial of the application was error.

The Corporation Counsel is much pleased with the decision and his assistant, William P. Burr, who won the 80-cent gas fight for the city, said last night, "It is a great victory for the autonomy of the Board of Estimate."

None of the members of the Public Service Commission would discuss the decision, but declared that it would be carried at once to the Court of Appeals.

WILLCOX SAILS TO-DAY.

Utilities Head Says Subway Plans Will Be Pushed This Summer.

Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission, who sails for Europe on the Mauretania this morning for a five weeks' vacation, declared yesterday that the mass of business now before the commission would not be neglected in his absence, and that he expects that upon his return much of it will be in shape for final consideration. The majority of the Commissioners will stay in town until his return.

"The Law Department and the Engineering Department of the commission," said he, "were now hard at work upon the forms of contracts and detailed plans for the different subway routes for which the commission recently asked the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for authority to proceed. This work will be pushed with all possible speed in the Summer, so that the commission will be able to advertise the routes in the Fall.

"As far as the subway portion of the Interborough's proposal is concerned, namely, the proposed extension down Seventh Avenue and Varick Street and the proposed extension northward in Lexington and Third Avenues, the commission cannot act immediately."

Mr. Willcox explained that as the routes were changed proceedings must start over in those cases.

HEARING ON CONEY FARES.

Companies Must Show Utilities Board Why They Shouldn't Be Cut.

The Public Service Commission issued an order yesterday to the Coney Island & Brooklyn Railroad Company to appear before it within ten days to show cause why it should not reduce the fare from Brooklyn to Coney Island on week days form 10 to 5 cents. The complaint has been filed by Jonas Monheimer, one of the original five-cent-fare complainants.

Three French Noblemen Arrive.

Three young French noblemen—Count de Bailliencourt-Courcol, Count de Ferrand de Mauvezin, and Count de Chantemerle de Villette—arrived yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from Cherbourg. They will stay two or three days in this city and then go to Canada to look at some mining properties in which they are interested.

AMBULANCE CHASERS WARNED BY JUDGES

In Suspending Lawyer Joseph H. Shay They Tell Other Offenders to Beware.

DISCREDIT TO PROFESSION

Disbarment Will Be the Penalty in Similar Cases That Come Up Hereafter.

Joseph H. Shay, who was associated with John F. McIntyre as counsel for Thornton Jenkins Hains at the latter's trial for the murder of William E. Annis, was suspended from practice yesterday by the Appellate Division for one year for unprofessional conduct. The charges were brought against Shay by District Attorney Jerome, who asked to have him disbarred on the ground that he employed on commission clerks in his office as "ambulance chasers."

In suspending Shay, the Appellate Division, through Justice Ingraham, who wrote the decision, administered a severe rebuke to "ambulance chasers," and gave warning that in future attorneys similarly offending will be summarily disbarred. The decision was in part:

"All agreements by which an attorney at law promises to pay to any person a percentage of any portion of the compensation that he is to receive from a client is prohibited, except in the case of another attorney called in to assist him in an action. It was this practice that the Court of Appeals characterized 'as applied to negligence cases under the name of ambulance chasing,' as having brought deserved discredit upon those engaged in it, and which it expressly denounced as criminal.

"I cannot, therefore, escape the conviction that upon this, showing the defendant was engaged in criminal practice and has been guilty of a misdemeanor. It is a practice that has been commented upon and criticised at meetings of lawyers and in judicial decisions as well as in the general public, and now, when it is for the first time in this department brought directly before the court, it is our duty to speak in no uncertain terms in condemning it as a violation of the criminal law in this State and also a practice which is unprofessional and destructive of the honor of the profession and of the confidence of the community in the integrity and honor of its members.

"It has been urged in extenuation of this offense that it is a practice which is common among members of the profession who are engaged in the prosecution of negligence cases, and that it is unfair to visit upon the offender, who has first been brought before the court upon a charge of this character, the extreme punishment of disbarment, and a majority of the court are of the opinion that this fact should be considered, and that instead of disbarment the respondent be suspended from practice for one year.

"We wish it to be distinctly understood, however, that after this expression of the views of the court upon the nature of the offense, the considerations that have influenced a majority of the court in deciding upon this punishment, rather than disbarment, will not be considered upon further conviction of practice of this kind."

SHOT AS HE WAITS FOR MUSIC

Sessa Wounded at Jefferson Park Concert—Assailant Escapes.

Thomas Jefferson Park, between 111th and 114th Streets, First Avenue, and the East River, was full of Italians last night waiting for a band concert. Two young Italians were seen talking excitedly together on a bench. One was Joseph Sessa of 312 East 110th Street, a shoemaker, and the other was known to the observers only as Nicola.

"I won't do it," Sessa said, jumping up.

Nicola jumped up also, wrenched a pistol from his pocket, shot Sessa behind the ear, and ran. Such a storm of excitement swept through the crowd that Policeman Cummings could not get any trace of Nicola.

Sessa was sent to the Harlem Hospital, where it was said that he would probably die.
